STROUDSBURG — Mrs. Helen Hay of 827 (rear) Scott St., Stroudsburg, Wednesday at 10 a.m. was notified by a representative of the U.S. Navy that her son, Ronald, was one of the 25 men killed by explosions aboard the USS Enterprise Tuesday.

Mrs. Hay did not have any details of her son's death but was told a telegram with details would follow. Late Wednesday night she had not received the information.

Mrs. Hay was notified by naval authorities while working at the Holland Thread Co., Stroudsburg.

Ronald E. Hay, 30, was born in Tannersville and was a son of Mrs. Hay and the late John E. Hay.

Ronald, a chief petty officer, attended Pocono High School in Tannersville and when he was 17 enlisted in the U.S. Navy.

He held an aviation electrician's mate rating and worked on the electrical system of planes aboard the Enterprise. This was his third tour of duty aboard the ill-fated ship.

He had planned to make the Navy his career.

In addition to his mother and widow, Mrs. Patricia Homer Hay, of LaMesa, Calif., he is survived by two brothers, Gerald Hay, Womelsdorf, Pa., and G. John, at home; two sisters, Mrs. Joyce Bush, Stroudsburg R.D. 5, and Mrs. Dorothy McQuate, Womelsdorf.

His widow said Wednesday night that funeral arrangements have not been completed but she believes he will be buried in California.

Foreign aid bill jumps $1 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson asked Congress for $1 billion more in foreign aid than was appropriated last year, declaring the United States "cannot in good conscience enjoy freedom in a world of poverty, violence and despair."

In his final budget message he sought a total of $2.34 billion to finance U.S. aid operations in 58 countries in the fiscal year beginning next July 1. Congress provided $1.382 billion for the current year ending June 30.

"President Johnson has firmly rejected the counsel of retreat to developing countries implied by last year's deep congressional cuts," commented William S. Gaud, outgoing administrator of the Agency for International Development—AID. "We can not live alone... our well-being depends upon the well-being of the world."

Gaud, who is stepping out of office next Monday said appointments of the new Nixon administration had not been consulted in advance on the 1970 AID program. Much will depend on their attitude.

Another unknown factor was the congressional reaction to the AID boost. First indications were that congressional foes would fight to keep the amount appropriated at the same level as this year, if not lower. Other congressmen considered friendly to AID wanted to explore an organization plan recently proposed by a presidential advisory commission.

Johnson told Congress that 84 per cent of the economic aid would be concentrated in 11 nations. The geographical priorities included Brazil, Chile, and Colombia which would get 70 per cent of $688 million requested for Latin America; India, Pakistan, Turkey, Korea and Indonesia, 92 per cent of $820 million requested for development loans; Vietnam, Laos, and Thailand, $515 million in supporting assistance.

Mrs. King plans center

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—The widow of Martin Luther King announced plans Wednesday for a memorial center to her husband, as religious and political leaders throughout the nation attended ceremonies to observe his birthday anniversary and urge that it be declared a national holiday.

"What we see beginning now," Coretta King said, "is no dead monument but a living memorial filled with all the vitality that was his, a center of human endeavor committed to the causes for which he lived and died."

Four cosmonauts in space

Russians may attempt orbital transfer

MOSCOW (AP) — Three Soviet cosmonauts roared from the earth Wednesday on an orbit close to that of a comrade who had been aloft 24 hours, leading to speculation that the space-men would attempt the world's first crew transfer in orbit.

(Related story on page two)

Successful transfer of a crewman from Soyuz 5, the new space ship, to Soyuz 4, which rocketed Lt. Col. Vladimir Shatalov into orbit, would give the Soviet Union the jump on the United States in a space feat for the first time since Lt. Alexei A. Leonov took a walk in space in March 1965.

The first crew transfer by U.S. astronauts is planned on America's next flight, Apollo 9, scheduled to begin Feb. 28. That will be a switch from the command ship to another craft.

Marines capture tunnels

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Marines captured several tunnels on the Batangan Peninsula Wednesday, seized food caches and smashed back an enemy attempt to break out of an allied trap.

Inland, the rest of the 8,200 U.S. and South Vietnamese that clamped a cordon around the enemy supply base Monday, ran into only light sniper fire.

The 3,000 Marines, who came in by sea in the largest amphibious operation of the war, halted the breakout attempt by an enemy force of unknown size. Two Marines were reported killed and seven wounded. Enemy casualties were unknown.

In another small skirmish, Marines killed four Viet Cong and two guerrillas defected, the U.S. Command reported.

Somewhere in the cordon on the peninsula, which is 50 miles southeast of the big U.S. military base at Da Nang, the allies believe there are 800 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops.

$16.2 million requested for Tocks

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE

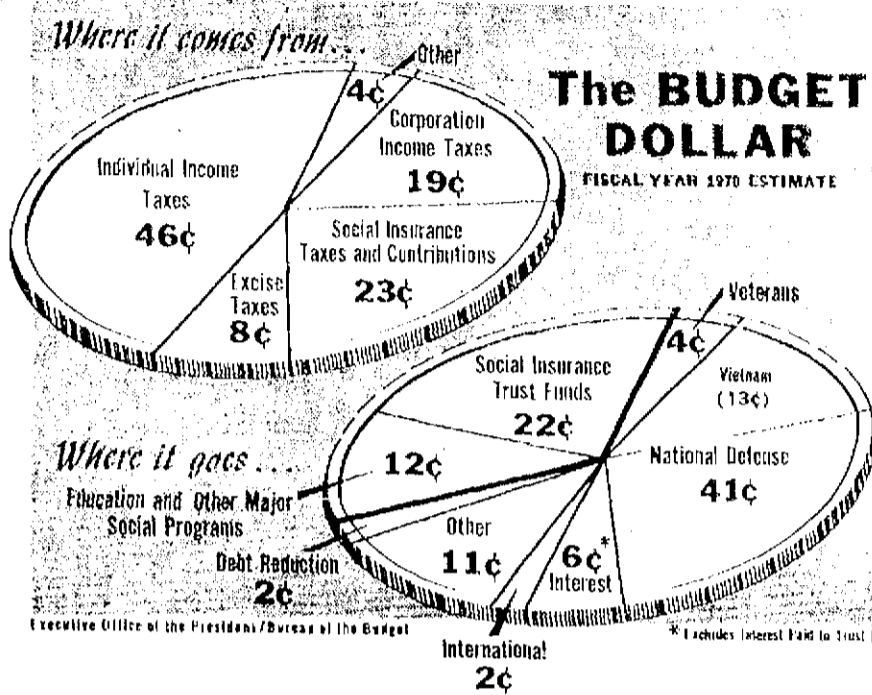

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The budget for fiscal 1970 presented to Congress Wednesday by President Johnson contains requests for $16.2 million for the Tocks Island Reservoir and adjacent Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

The 1970 budget request is nearly $6 million larger than that made by the administration for fiscal 1969. Last year, President Johnson requested $10.3 million for the joint project.

The Army Corps of Engineers, which is responsible for the construction of the dam and reservoir, has asked for $4 million for land acquisition at the site. This is identical to last year's budget request, although the Congress only granted the corps $3.8 million for land acquisition.

The Interior Dept. is requesting $12,240,000 for the recreation area, their responsibility in the total project. The budget earmarks $12 million for land acquisition for the park. Last year, the Interior Dept. asked for $5.5 million.

How the federal government collects and spends your tax dollar

Record U.S. budget totals $195 billion

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Johnson included a big boost in Social Security benefits for 25 million Americans in his record-breaking $195.3 billion final budget submitted to Congress Wednesday.

The largest-ever budget projects a $3.4 billion surplus for fiscal 1970 beginning next July 1 as a result of his recommendation for a one-year extension of the 10 per cent income surtax.

It will be up to a Republican president, Richard M. Nixon, who takes office Monday, and a Democratic-controlled Congress to accept or revise the budget in the months ahead.

But Budget Director Charles J. Zwick, after frequent consultations with Nixon administration officials in recent weeks, said they agree on the appropriateness of a 1970 surplus.

By implication this could mean they go along with continuance of the surtax—later confirmed by Nixon in a statement. Zwick emphasized the incoming officials were not committed to the specifics of the budget.

However, Nixon issued a statement giving qualified endorsement to extension of the surtax, pending studies by his administration and the Congress in the next few months.

If Johnson's recommendations are accepted, not only will older Americans get higher Social Security payments but all wage earners and employers will pay higher taxes to finance the increases.

In addition, it will cost an extra penny to mail a letter, telephone and auto excise levies will not drop as now scheduled, and transportation taxes will be increased—including a jump from 5 to 7 per cent in the levy on air passenger tickets.

Agriculture spending decreases

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Outlays for the Department of Agriculture in fiscal 1970 will be $635 million below 1969, according to the new budget President Johnson presented to Congress Wednesday.

A major portion of this reduction is reflected in a decline of $588 million in expected outlays for various price support programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

While the USDA will spend an estimated $9.3 billion in fiscal 1969, which ends June 30, Johnson has only requested approximately $17.7 billion for 1970.

The President included $25.7 billion to finance Vietnamese war operations in the year ahead. He said this would pay for the current troop strength and levels of fighting. These levies are down somewhat so that the war figure is $3.5 billion less than that for the current year.

Johnson said that of course all Americans were hoping the Paris talks will bring an end to the war.

If this happens, he said, different decisions can be made on the surtax and military spending.

He urged that, if Congress votes to keep the surtax, it give Nixon power to end it or reduce it before June 30, 1970, if events warrant this.

These detailed the many new programs in such fields as education, health and conservation, and cited the beneficiaries.

For example, he said 30 million older Americans are getting help in meeting their health care needs through medicare and nine million children from low-income families are benefiting from federal aid grants under the 1965 Elementary and Secondary Education Act.

However, both Johnson and Zwick called the budget an extremely tight one, and there were sure to be cries in Congress that some programs are underfinanced.

Telecasts from space showed Volynov and crewman Yevgeny Khronov in the control cabin. Their companion, flight engineer Alexei Eliseyev, showed viewers containers of space food.

The first manned Soyuz flight in April 1967, ended in a crash and the death of the pilot, Vladimir Komarov.

Soviet officials reported both ships were operating normally and the four men were in good condition.

Soviet space missions have never been announced in detail ahead of time.

Shatalov reported from Soyuz 4 that he had watched the fiery launch of Soyuz 5.

Official toll hits 25 dead, 85 hurt

PEARL HARBOR (AP)—Adm. John J. Hyland, Pacific Fleet commander, said Wednesday that Navy investigators "are rapidly narrowing down the probable cause" of the explosions and fire that killed 25 seamen and injured 85 others on the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise.

All but one of the 17 previously reported missing were found during a crew muster, the Navy said. An air and sea search continued for the missing man.

Hyland declined to answer questions about preliminary findings. He said "The fire damage was less than I expected." He called the incident a "very unfortunate accident."

The Navy's Pacific Fleet command revised the death toll to 25 after a 14th Naval District spokesman here put the figure at 24.

Hyland's session with reporters was brief. He read a prepared statement and left without answering any questions.

"On behalf of the Pacific Fleet I want to extend condolences to the families of the men lost," he stated.

He said he is "confident we will find out just what caused the fire." He praised the crew of the world's largest warship, saying they were well-trained and did things quickly.

Three of the injured were flown Tuesday night to Brooke Army Medical Center in Texas for treatment of burns. Fifty-eight other injured were at Tripler Army Hospital in Honolulu, the remainder aboard the Enterprise in Pearl Harbor.

The Navy said an assessment of damages and clean-up of the ship are now under way. Twenty men from the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard at Bremerton, Wash., arrived here to inspect damage from the fire which swept the stern of the world's first nuclear carrier following a series of explosions.

Fifteen aircraft aboard the 85,000-ton carrier were destroyed in the blaze which broke out around 3:15 a.m. Hawaii time Tuesday as the ship conducted a bombing training exercise 75 miles from Pearl Harbor.

The first explosion occurred in or near an F4 Phantom jet parked on the flight deck about 75 feet from the stern of the ship.

The Navy first attributed the initial explosion to a bomb falling from an airplane landing on the carrier, but later withdrew this pending an investigation.

After the fires were extinguished, the carrier returned to Pearl Harbor under its own power. Its propulsion system and eight nuclear reactors were not involved in the fire.

Cmdr. Samuel B. Lancaster, public affairs officer for the Enterprise, indicated that the 1,123-foot carrier will be sent to the mainland for repairs.

Defense spending $18 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $81.5-billion defense budget President Johnson handed Congress Wednesday is geared to less combat in Vietnam and more U.S. muscle elsewhere in the troubled world.

His military spending proposals for fiscal 1970 are slightly above outlays for the current year and the costliest since World War II.

The scheduled drop of nearly $3.5 billion in direct military spending for Vietnam is more than offset by the mounting cost of the more lethal weapons, missiles, aircraft and ships which President Johnson would add to the nation's arsenal before June 30, 1970.

The President coupled his hopes for the successful conclusion of Vietnam peace talks with the actuality of continued fighting there. And he projected a six-year cost of $108.5 billion for that conflict through mid-1970.

Despite the proposed dollar cutback for Vietnam, the new budget shows a 5,000 rise in American military manpower in Southeast Asia, where 639,000 would be deployed within 18 months.

This represents no change, however, from the authorized Vietnam ceiling of 549,000 men, not yet reached.

Johnson's spending plans for the coming year disclosed a net reduction of 32,000 in overall military manpower.

Pope's critics 'reformists'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI accused his Roman Catholic critics Wednesday of trying to overthrow the Church in what he called the form and spirit of the Protestant Reformation.

It was the first since the worldwide outcry against his stand on birth control that the Pope had publicly likened the wave of opposition to his authority to the 16th century revolt that split western Christianity into Roman Catholics and Protestants.

Apollo 9 crews in escape drills

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Apollo 9 astronauts and three backup pilots practiced emergency escapes from their spaceship Wednesday, moving toward a Feb. 28 blastoff for America's first crew transfer in orbit.

Dressed in space suits, Air Force Lt. Col. James A. McDivitt and David R. Scott and civilian astronaut Russell L. Schweickart crawled inside their cone-shaped capsule at the launch pad, then rehearsed quick-exit procedures to be used in the event of an emergency like the spacecraft fire that killed three Apollo astronauts two years ago.

After that tragedy, quick-opening hatches were installed on spaceships to permit pilots to open the door in about three seconds. The Apollo hatch could not be opened in less than 90 seconds.

McDivitt, Scott and Schweickart and their three Apollo 9 backup astronauts—Navy Cmdr. Charles Conrad Jr. and Richard F. Gordon and Lt. Cmdr. Alan L. Bean—worked with safety personnel and spacecraft technicians in a full-scale dress rehearsal of an emergency situation.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said that if a real emergency existed, astronauts and launch pad personnel could slide down a chute at the base of the rocket into an underground room built like a bomb shelter or, if time permitted, be hustled away in emergency vehicles standing by.

Apollo 9 will be the first transfer in orbit by U. S. astronauts from one spaceship to another—one of the apparent main goals of the Soviet Union's Soyuz 4 and Soyuz 5 spaceships that circled earth Wednesday.

During the 10-day mission in earth orbit, McDivitt and Schweickart are to transfer from a three-man Apollo capsule into another craft called a lunar module, the type spaceship that will taxi future astronauts from Apollo ships in lunar orbit to the moon's surface.

Unlike Soyuz 4 and 5, which required separate launches, both the three-man Apollo 9 command ship and lunar module will be flung into space by a single rocket, the Saturn 5.

One panting official said on his return of a walking tour of the exhibit area.

"Bigness is the dominant character of this year's farm show," said State Agriculture Secretary Leland H. Bull. "I have been impressed by the massiveness of the equipment and machinery being displayed here. It reflects the mounting trend of automation in our farms and growth in their size."

Bull took occasion to compliment the state and city police on their handling of traffic. The secretary said parking facilities were available for 20,000 vehicles, but still they were taxed.

The group of finalists, from which young Koefer emerged as champion, included: Larry McEwen, 18, a senior at Bangor Area High School, Northampton County; George E. Ungemach, 17, a senior at Anville-Cleona High School, Lebanon County; Roy Jacob, 17, junior at United High School in Indiana County and Larry L. Longberry, 17, senior at Townville High School, Crawford County.

The Star Farmer selection concluded the Future Farmers of America's part in the current farm show. The blue-jacketed contingents of farm boys from all over Pennsylvania provide a colorful adjunct to the week-long harvest festival.

Cold, winter sunshine continued to favor farm show participants, in contrast to most other annual farm shows of this decade which were beset by weather unfit even for the animals.

Wednesday's crowd soared to an estimated 165,000, biggest of the week.

Plush train streaks by in trial run

NEW YORK (AP)—A fast, quiet, comfortable train with the plush look of an airliner streaked from Washington to New York Wednesday to inaugurate a new type of passenger service.

Newsmen, railroad officials and governmental dignitaries rode the Penn Central Railroad's new Metroliner, a 160-mile-an-hour train designed to make rail travel attractive to passengers.

The six-car Metroliner will begin regular service Thursday, with one 226-mile trip each way between the two major cities.

It is still experimental and whether it is successful will depend on whether people ride it. But Penn Central hopes it may be the answer to some of the transportation woes of what one speaker called "our single city between Boston and Washington."

One-way Metroliner fare from New York to Washington will be $12.75, against $18 on an airplane.

"No other means of transportation can match this schedule on a center city basis," said Stuart Sanders, board chairman of the Penn Central.

The Metroliners will make the Washington-New York trip in about three hours. That's about one hour faster than the present schedule.

It would be about half the time of Wednesday's trip. The train left Washington at 9:50 a.m. It arrived in New York at 3:59 p.m.—one minute ahead of its exhibition schedule, but six hours and nine minutes out of Washington.

The train stopped along the way for ceremonies in Baltimore, Wilmington, Del.; Philadelphia, and Trenton, N. J.

Damage set at $200,000 in Mount Bethel factory fire

BANGOR — Nearly $200,000 in damage was caused by a spectacular fire which destroyed a storage building owned by the JJ Manufacturing Co., Inc. in Upper Mt. Bethel Township late Tuesday night and early Wednesday morning. More than 100 firemen from throughout the Slate Belt and neighboring New Jersey battled the blaze for nearly five hours. The fire is believed to have started in the furnace room and rapidly spread throughout the one-story building. The loss of the building, located along the East Bangor and Mount Bethel Highway, was estimated between $175,000 to $200,000.

Intense heat of the fire, which began 11:30 p.m. Tuesday, threatened a row of homes in front of the building. Firemen doused the endangered buildings with water.

A home on one side of the blazing structure was threatened with fire for some time and firemen finally sprayed foam over the home to protect it.

The firemen were hampered by 20 degree temperatures and a lack of water. Firemen had to lay a 2,000 foot water line to a nearby reservoir for water.

The highway department also had to be ordered out to cinder the road which became a massive sheet of ice when water from the fire hoses froze.

The burning structure was only a part of the massive JJ Manufacturing Co. complex and was used as a warehouse. The factory itself is directly across the highway from the warehouse.

The more than 100 firemen from Upper Mt. Bethel, East Bangor, Bangor, North Bangor, Portland and Knowlton Township, N. J. were also hampered by high winds which fanned the roaring flames.

Foundations remain. Persistent firemen, however, battled the blaze until 4 a.m. when only the foundations of the warehouse remained.

The warehouse contained warping processes used in the manufacture of tricort knitting and also materials used in the manufacturing complex.

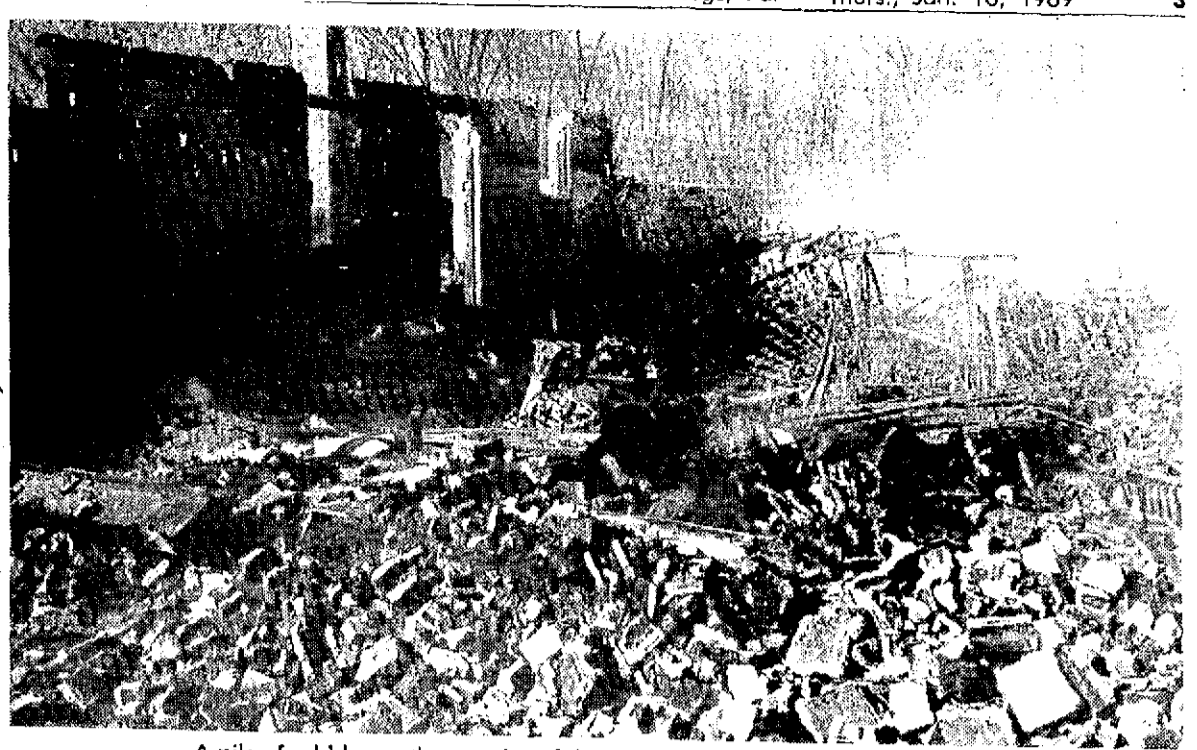

Residents in nearby Johnsonville reportedly heard a large explosion at the time the fire began.

Stroud Township Police while on patrol could see the blazing factory warehouse from Route 191.

The firm, which began its operation in 1946 in the structure that was destroyed, employs 30 persons. Workers arrived at the plant Wednesday and production was normal.

John Miller of Bangor, R. D., is president, and his son, George, of Bangor, is vice president.

The Salvation Army was at the scene to provide weary firemen with coffee. Workmen from the Metropolitan Edison Light Co. were at the scene at 3 a.m. restoring electricity to homes in the area.

A pile of rubble are the remains of the JJ Manufacturing Co., Inc. warehouse.

LBJ offers sentimental adieu

Lyndon B. Johnson, probably the most criticized and abused president in the history of the United States, bid farewell to Congress and to the people he has served Tuesday night.

Obviously overcome with sentimental thoughts of the past, the retiring president presented a farewell address that ran the course from his accomplishments to his hopes for the future.

The retiring president didn't have any surprises as he called for extension of the 10 per cent surcharge, added money for our cities and for the poor. He asked that more funds be made available to fight crime.

He spoke of internal peace and peace abroad, particularly in Vietnam. He pointed to the urgent need for peace in the Middle East and added spending for health and job training. He called for reorganization of the postal system.

LBJ, probably more calm than at any time in his career, revealed that the United States will have a surplus of $2.4 billion dollars next June 30, when the fiscal year ends, and not a deficit of eight billion dollars as expected.

The president listed as his biggest disappointment the fact that Congress failed to pass laws governing the registration of firearms.

He spoke of reasoning, future views, challenges, confidence, fear and hate, but never placed the blame on anyone. His talk was impressive because it was low key, direct and without anger.

During his closing remarks President Johnson spoke of his 38 years in Washington, rising from door keeper of the House of Representatives to President of the United States.

The retiring president, making his sixth and last State of the Union message, said good-bye to his old friends and thanked them for their help over the years.

As tears welled in the eyes of President Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, the retiring chief executive spoke of his troubles and then said with the slightest quiver in his voice, "Few presidents have been blessed with so much."

History books may someday substantiate this feeling.

Tough to replace

Dr. Eric A. Walker has resigned as president of Pennsylvania State University and the entire Keystone State will feel the loss.

Walker is not only an outstanding educator, but a tremendous organizer and a tireless builder.

Penn State has virtually tripled its enrollment under Walker, who found 13,000 students on campus when he arrived in 1956 and as of this year the count is 38,600. The value of the university's physical plant has grown from $85,000,000 to $258,000,000 and the school is now in the midst of the largest building program in its history.

The university's research budget has risen from $8,000,000 to $36,000,000. Enrollment in continuing education programs has grown from 28,000 to 96,000. A Commonwealth Campus system with 19 campuses located within commuting range of virtually the entire state population has grown from 12 general extension centers.

Milton S. Hershey Medical Center, home of the university's College of Medicine, and the Capitol Campus in Middletown for upper class and graduate education, make the Penn State system one of the most comprehensive in the United States.

Walker's official retirement date is July 1, 1970, giving Penn State approximately 18 months to locate a new president.

Judging Walker's record and the growth of Pennsylvania State University, this may not allow enough time to complete the task of finding a leader of similar ability.

Dead at 85

This will be the final column about John Michael Bishop. He is dead at 85.

He was in a coma when I kissed him and whispered: "Pleasant dreams." The lean ruddy face and the white hair looked good on the white pillow, but the green plastic tubes in his nose gave him the appearance of an astronaut headed for an older planet. The eyes were half open. Each breath was a personal battle.

The old tiger had gone to the wars too often, and he no longer had the strength to defeat a fibrillating heart, uremia, bronchial pneumonia, emphysema and edema. They ganged up on him and he fought so hard that it seemed, for a day or two, as though he might win once more.

He was everybody's old man, and mine all the way. Readers wrote to him, not by the scores, but by the thousands. He would read the letters, and shake his head. "How the hell did I become the tail on your kite?" he would say. He was, first, last and all the time, a dominating Irishman.

He was born in Jersey City, N.J., Oct. 29, 1883. His mother was Mary Murphy Bishop; his father was Jim Bishop, a coal heaver at the Eagle Oil Works. She was born in the city of Cork, he was born in Lower Scooby, County Wexford. John was the first born, and he looked frail to his mother, so she had a shotgun christening for him the day after his birth.

Skipped every grade
He attended St. Paul's School and skipped every grade he attended. He finished six years of elementary school in three. A nun gave him a letter to his mother, stating: "I predict great things for your son John." Thirty years later, he was in uniform when he met the nun again. "What did you do with your life?" she said. Dad tossed his chest out and said: "I'm a lieutenant of police, Sister." She shook her head in sorrow. "What a pity," she murmured. "What a pity."

He was 23 when he married Jenny Tier. They had "kept company," as he called it, for six years, not counting "the years we didn't speak to each other." He hired a funeral coach and two horses for the wedding. The honeymoon consisted of walking across Stevens Ave. from the home of his in-laws to a second floor rental. As a policeman, he earned $80 a month.

There were three children: Jim, John and Adele. After 15 years of marriage, he left my mother for her best friend. The split, lasted 16 years and he tried hard to patch the marriage. My mother agreed to it, and shortly afterward, became blind.

John Bishop atoned by working hard for her, doing the housekeeping ("Joy makes dish washing almost a pleasure") and giving her insulin shots for diabetes. In the final years, he became her slave and she slid down toward the end tapping a cane and smiling and saying: "Where's my boy friend?"

He had always been a great student and, as time began to dim his eyes and set his head adrift with dreams, he enrolled for more courses: astronomy, physics, English. He began to ask for a nightcap, after he moved in with us, and his ulcer said no, but Big John said: "It's not nice sitting alone in my room, unable to sleep. If you know how that one drink brings me back 50 years..."

He walked up to the door of death six times and stopped and turned back. He had the last rites so many times he began to tell the priests how it should be done. Nor did the tiger ever show fear. He was, above all else, a man. He was in two gun battles and no one knows how many hand-to-hand fights with felons.

He enjoyed whiskey and women and chess and pinocchio and euhre and he believed in leprechauns and astrology. The last time I saw him conscious was in Memorial Hospital, Hollywood, Florida. Whenever he was asked how he felt, even when the situation was bad, he had three stock responses: "Okay," "Pretty good" and "Fifty-fifty." As I kissed him goodbye, he said: "Okay, Jim." I said: "Is there anything you need?" The eyes sparkled and he said: "I'll think of something the minute after you leave."

This will be the final column about John Michael Bishop. He is dead at 85.

The Pennsylvania Story

Amendment needed

(EDITORS NOTE: For the fifth year in a row a segment of Pennsylvania is faced, with the prospect of "taxation without representation" as a result of an election stand-off over the seating of a member of the State Senate. This two-part series explores in depth the latest legislative-election fiasco to strike the Keystone State.)

PART TWO

HARRISBURG — Many contend that what is needed in Pennsylvania is an amendment to the Election Code that would guarantee all of the people legislative representation all of the time.

This was the thought offered last week by Senate Democratic Leader Ernest P. Kline of Beaver County, who said he was seriously considering introducing a proposal of this nature.

"What we're looking into," he said, "is the possibility of a law that in the event of a disputed election would allow for the seating in the Legislature of the man who is reported to have the most votes immediately following a general election. If through a recount or some other legal procedure this man should later be found to have lost the election, his certification would be revoked and he would be replaced by the man who was declared the winner.

"This," he continued, "would guarantee all people full-time representation in the General Assembly, and would put an end to legislative vacancies caused by election disputes."

If Pennsylvania had such a law now, it would have been possible to avoid the situation that cropped up in the Senate last week when Attorney General William C. Bennett and the Majority Republicans declined to seat Democrat W. Louis Coppersmith of Johnstown.

Coppersmith was a 54-vote winner over incumbent Republican Richard J. Green, Jr. last November in a race to represent the 35th Senatorial District.

Legal maneuvers

However, through a series of legal maneuvers, two helpful opinions by Bennett, and some assistance from his former Senate Republican colleagues Green has been able to prevent Coppersmith from being seated.

Now, although this was not a new experience for the Senate—in fact, it was the fifth straight year the chamber had convened with one of its 50 seats vacant due to a disputed election—the 1969 opening day session erupted into furious debate when Democrats learned Coppersmith would not be certified.

Kline made a motion that the Senate by a majority vote take the matter out of the hands of the attorney general and resolve the contested election itself—as it is authorized to do by the state constitution.

With Green now appealing before the State Supreme Court, with Coppersmith considering a writ to force Secretary of the Commonwealth to certify him as the victor, it most likely will be some time before the final results of this particular election are known. But in the meantime, it appears to have opened the door to some very undesirable possibilities. For example:

— It could happen that from now on the election of legislators will be decided on an opinion from the State Justice Department, or on a court decision, or by the controlling parties in the House and Senate.

— It could happen that from now on the vote of the people will be an unnecessary preliminary to the real selection of a state legislator by someone other than the electorate.

Democrat Kline, in his final statement during the Senate debate, appealed to the chamber to avoid such pitfalls.

Current look at drugs

Editor, The Record:

I noted with interest that the Elementary Parent-Teachers association of East Stroudsburg is having an open meeting on drug addiction because of "drug use increasing among county high school students." Their concern, I am sure, is well-meaning, but their heart is in the wrong place.

I don't think I've seen the particular film "Pit of Despair" that will be shown, but in countless high school and college hygiene classes I've seen ones so similar that I could outline the plot with no difficulty.

There will be stomach-turning pictures of needle-marked arms and wasting human beings who more resemble skeletons than living persons. You will also hear the horrendous cries from the "cold turkey" ward of some city hospital as addicts break away from their drugs.

But, in all truth, the film is completely irrelevant to the group that will see it, and they could have been more enlightened by staying home to watch "Here Come the Brides."

The drugs that their sons and daughters will come in contact with will not be the 1950's group of addictive ones: heroin, opium, etc. Instead, it will be marijuana, speed, LSD, and the other mind-expanding drugs, which are not addictive. (The so-called misused statistic that nine out of 10 drug addicts started on marijuana should be abandoned once and for all because it erroneously implies that nine out of 10 marijuana users will then become drug addicts, which is completely false.)

They will not receive these drugs from the stereotyped "pusher" with his greasy thinning hair and heady little eyes. They will get them from still other friends.

I think it is important that this distinction be made, and that the differing effects of these two kinds of drugs be emphasized. Witness the current local post-conviction hearing of a young man who could face a 5 to 10-year prison term for the sale of one marijuana cigarette to a minor.

If it were suggested that such ridiculously severe penalties were to also be imposed on a bartender who had served five or six drinks to a minor and distorted his reasoning and physical coordination to a much greater degree than the one cigarette, I am sure there would be an immediate protest.

It is important that information about drugs be made available to everyone, and the above-mentioned PTA is to be commended for its concern. But make sure that the information is both current and accurate, or it will be worse than useless.

Questions Rooney's plans

Editor, The Record:

Among priorities for 1969, Congressman Fred Rooney assigns to Vietnam peace the leading position. On this we can all join him fervently, though it is to his discredit that he has been one of the more vocal supporters of that ill-fated venture.

An article in today's (Jan. 10, 1969) Record notes that 7,693 Americans have been killed in action since the start of the Paris negotiations. It should also be further noted that most of these are as a result of the "search-and-destroy" operations of American forces in pursuit of the "negotiate-from-strength" philosophy. This occurred in the Korean War also as in the Vietnam War as we buttress the corrupt regimes; then, of Rhee; now, of Ky. The end of the war would mean the end of their rule.

Other priorities, Rooney assigns to advances in Tocks Island and Martins Creek near Bangor. We may ask, if the congressman truly represents us, why he does not assign any such priorities to the Brodhead Creek project, or to Pocono Creek flood control, which is not mentioned any more? Are not the communities along these streams vulnerable as ever?

We sympathize with the Bangor community over their losses, as we would any community. Vastly more loss of life, however occurred on the Brodhead Creek in 1955, and much greater property damage. As for Tocks Island, no loss of life occurred in 1955 as a direct result of flooding on the Delaware.

What sort of planning, if he called that, is it, to construct Tocks Island and omit dams on the Brodhead? Truly, that is building the roof of the house before the main part.

Another angle, is that small dam construction would mean work for a number of small local contractors; large Tocks Island Dam construction means outfits of far greater size, from outside the community. Ones who often lobby for such projects.

Blast at bomb threats

Editor, The Record:

Once more we read of bomb threats to local schools.

But we have not yet read about what happened to the boys arraigned recently before a judge behind doors closed to the public.

The names of those culprits were withheld presumably because they were juveniles, with no regard given the parents of thousands of other law-abiding juveniles whose health was endangered and who were deprived of their right to protection.

Whatever the judgment, one thing is certain; it was no deterrent! For scarcely two weeks have passed and again schools are threatened with bombs.

Aside from the protective anonymity of culprits known to the court, an indictment stands against those responsible for the education of our children but who fail to teach them not only their rights under the law but also their obligations.

It is easily conceivable that a bomb threat might be made to the local hospital causing a panic in which a critically ill patient or one undergoing surgery might die.

In this case the culprit may be charged with manslaughter; and the family of the victim will not be content to remain inactive and silent because the act is looked upon as a prank!

Thanks to community

Editor, The Record:

I would like to commend the communities of Stroudsburg and East Stroudsburg on their financial support of the State College Championship Football Banquet.

The affair was a tremendous success. The East Stroudsburg State College squad received gold wrist watches, mementos the players will cherish for a lifetime.

I also feel this community effort is significant to allay the fears of those who would have us believe there is a gap between the college and the community.

The banquet committee of Frank Gochal, Ed Krawitz, Dick Kruger, John Kulba, and Les Rossi did an excellent job, and the squad is most appreciative of their endeavors.

Again, I would like to extend my sincere thanks on behalf of the coaches and administration for your most generous and cooperative effort.

Allen-Goldsmith Report

Morse to Columbia?

John A. Goldsmith

WASHINGTON—Former Senator Wayne Morse is being proposed for president of dissension-troubled Columbia University.

In urging the selection of the veteran Oregon liberal Democrat, who was narrowly defeated for a fifth term last year, influential New York friends are stressing his exceptional qualifications and experience. Particularly, they are citing the following:

(1) Morse is a one-time law professor and dean of a law school, and as chairman of the Senate Education subcommittee played a leading role in the enactment in recent years of billions of dollars in federal aid for elementary schools and colleges. He was a pioneer in this landmark legislation, and was widely acclaimed in academic circles.

(2) Morse has a national reputation as an arbiter. He was a member of and headed a number of special White House panels appointed to settle major labor disputes. In these complex and difficult negotiations, Morse displayed outstanding astuteness, unchallengeable fairness coupled with unshakable firmness.

(3) Morse was one of the first and most persistent critics of the Vietnam War. He was one of two senators who voted against the historic Gulf of Tonkin resolution, and was the leading "dove" in Congress.

His friends, in recommending him for head of Columbia University, pointed out that Morse's prominent stand against the Vietnam conflict would strongly appeal to large elements of the disaffected students.

The former Oregonian legislator is currently in Washington closing his Senate office and disposing of a stock farm in nearby Maryland. He is undecided about his future, except that he does intend to "remain active". Whether this will be in Washington or elsewhere only time will tell.

Several former Republican Senate colleagues are known to have suggested to President-elect Nixon that Morse be named to a federal regulatory agency. Under the law, most of them require representation from the opposition party, and Nixon was told Morse would be a popular choice.

Stories Behind Words

By William Penfield

Bailiwick

When a person speaks of his "bailiwick," he refers to a place that he regards as his own, one where he commands a certain amount of respect or has some authority. The word used to denote an administrative district.

The "baili" comes from "bailiff," a person in England who used to be the chief administrative officer in a district.

The "wick" comes from the Anglo-Saxon "wic," which meant village.

A "bailiwick," later "balliwick," therefore, was a district over which a bailiff was in charge.

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — American jazz singer Joy Marshall, starring in the London mod musical "Maggie May" was found dead at 32. The backers of "Love Match," who poured $500,000 into that West Coast flop, are making dissonant noises: "Where did all the money go?"

Comic Pat Henry had some sad personal news. Oscar Levant's daughter Armand and actor Byron Palmer are acting very middle-class. Seven LP albums are out with nothing but the songs from "Promises, Promises," plus a hundred singles.

Gobbler's Knob is a restaurant around the corner from Gracie Square Hospital, has free lunch and at dinner, a snazzy menu of $5 per entree; it gets the rich doctors for dinner, poor interns for the free lunches.

The horserace scene in "Lady in Cement" pulls off a small miracle: the horses start on the main track and finish on the inside turf course; no bookie would pay off on that booboo.

Bobby Darin jettisoned his toupee for his Copacabana engagement — but wears it in the Copa ads. Expo '69, the Caribbean mini-Worlds Fair, sent its first free press pass to those well known journalists Ari and Jackie. They do sell papers.

Al Goldman, who owned the old Ruby Foo's in N.Y. and for 15 years operated the Fu Manchu in Miami Beach, passed away. Al invented wan ton soup mit kreplach.

The cheap sex films in Times Square grind houses have creative credits which are mostly phony; none of the craftsmen making them wants to admit it. Bartenders tell us the Bloody Mary is nosing out the martini as pre-lunch blasts. Oscar winner Sammy Cahn wrote lyrics to a tune by pianist Bobby Gosh of Kenny's Steak Pub; Gosh goshed to Sammy, "I hope you break my losing streak," and Sammy sighed, "I hope you don't break my winning streak."

Get him: John Davidson's Persian Room Edwardian-mod costume will include a see-through blouse under his formal threads. them together, ordering them to place both hands flat on a table; they complied: "Now every one of you SOB's with a diamond ring is fired." Half of them got fired.

It's also true that Gov. Nelson Rockefeller gave Prohibition its quietly final blow: his father John D. Jr. always had given huge sums to temperance groups. He didn't believe Prohibition was a failure until young Nelson took him for a walk down one 49th St. block (which the Rockefellers owned and which became part of Rockefeller Center) and showed his dad 29 speakeasies operating openly in that one brief stretch; John D. Jr. thereupon wrote a letter stating Prohibition was a failure and the consequent publicity turned the drive toward damper, happier times. So Nelson here's to you!

The suit is for damages to Moyer's car which he claims was caused by Malibashka's negligence, recklessness and carelessness.

What happened to Breezy Park? History precedes improvements

EAST STROUDSBURG — A greater park in the East Stroudsburg Playground area is the goal of the civic development committee of the Monroe County Garden Club. A panel discussion on the results of a survey will be held at 2:45 today following the Garden Club meeting at the YMCA in Stroudsburg.

The committee, Mrs. Ernest Schwartz, Mrs. Eli Travis and Mrs. Harold Lanterman, have been meeting with members of the East Stroudsburg Playground Committee: Horace Walters, Herbert Yutz, Herman Luber, James Devaney and Mayor Thomas Kistler.

Mayor Kistler, Luber, Devaney and Yutz will speak on today's panel on the result of their survey of conditions of the playground, and on the plans discussed at two meetings of the group with the Garden Club committee at the homes of Mrs. Travis and Mrs. Schwartz, and in the office of Mayor Kistler.

The immediate plans call for improving and beautifying the entrance of the playground and other sites within it.

One of the first accomplishments of the group was to change the name from "playground" to "park" to better describe its function. Many facilities for adult activities have been added in past years and it has become a great picnic area with a pavilion for church and club groups.

A name for Park will be taken up in the near future

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Finally found somebody who remembers something further back than I do — when they had a merry-go-round and a little roller coaster at the East Stroudsburg playground, then Breezy Point Park.

I do dimly remember the swinging bridge, although the most vividly was the one that went to Carson's Island Park at Water Gap. Anyway, everybody will have a chance to hear more about the Park's future at the panel discussion following the Garden Club meeting today at the Y.

The news of Dr. Helen Bell Trimble's death will probably invoke a lot of memories for former students at the Normal School. I recall her best as a member of AAUW.

One tribute which would probably have delighted her came from Mr. and Mrs. Chester Mertens who remember her as "our favorite chaperone."

In light of today's gradual dropping of college dormitory restrictions for women entirely, even the word chaperone has sort of a Victorian ring. But in the days when Chester Mertens was courting a young coed on campus, the only way a young lady could ride with a young man in a car was if they were accompanied by a chaperone.

So when Chester wanted to take his girl for dinner at the Bantonsville Hotel in his spanking new Model T, they'd invite Dr. Trimble to go along as the most congenial — and most understanding — of the faculty women.

Rationed on dances

By JEAN ADAMS

RATIONED: (Q.) I'm 13 and rationed on dances. I can go only once a month. My mother says I've been going to too many things lately and that I'm too young for so much, and once a month is enough.

I haven't been to a party in two years. A party now and then, plus only one dance a month, doesn't seem like too much to me. Can you help me?

Confused and Depressed in Connecticut

(A.) Maybe you and your mother can get together and work out a compromise halfway between "too much" and "too little."

Most 13-year-olds go to parties or social events of some type on an average of once every one to two weeks.

You need to attend some well-chaperoned social activity oftener than once a month.

Talk seriously with your mother about this. Give her your ideas but listen to hers, too, and abide by her decision.

NO CURL: (Q.) My hair is very thick. It falls just a little below my shoulders. How can I get a curl to stay in it?

Can you send me advice on styling my hair or maybe a book on hair styles? My face is round.

A Fan in West Virginia

(A.) The curl falls out because your hair is so heavy. The thickness and length are probably naturally pretty, but they pull any curl right out. A good haircut is your answer. Plus perhaps a body wave.

Your important styling point is to avoid a hairdo that adds width to your round face. Any style that gives your face a more oval appearance is likely to be flattering.

Coordinator fills state health post

HARRISBURG — John J. Farrell of Dallas, Pa., recently was appointed community health consultant for northeastern Pennsylvania with the state Office of Comprehensive Health Planning. He will receive $9,923 annually.

Located in Wilkes-Barre, Farrell will coordinate all health planning activities in fifteen counties: Tioga, Bradford, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Wyoming, Lackawanna, Wayne, Luzerne, Pike, Monroe, Carbon, Lehigh, Berks, Schuylkill and Northampton.

As consultant, Farrell will work with areawide agencies doing comprehensive health planning. These agencies presently are being formed with grants available from the Public Health Service under a 1966 law of Congress promoting comprehensive health planning. Area wide agencies will provide a framework within which all existing health planning organizations can coordinate activities and plan comprehensively.

As a staff member of the state Office of Comprehensive Health Planning, Farrell will assist the preparation of the state comprehensive health plan by gathering health data on areas not included in areawide agencies. The annual state plan will establish health needs throughout the state and the resources available to meet those needs.

Prior to his present position, Farrell had been administrative officer for the Community Vaccination Project in Luzerne County, a state Department of Health program. Farrell received both his B.S. degree in political science and M.S. in rehabilitation counseling from the University of Scranton. He and his wife have three children, ages 1½ to 4.

Registrations will be taken at the lake from 1 to 2 p.m.

On hand to help in the festival will be members of the Women's Civic Club of Delaware Water Gap.

The festival is open to all children in the Borough of Delaware Water Gap.

Gas station burglarized

EAST STROUDSBURG — Burglars entered George's Friendly Service Station, Washington St., East Stroudsburg, and made off with an undetermined amount of cash from a pinball machine and a cigarette machine.

East Stroudsburg police said entry was gained by breaking a window in the rear of the building. Once inside the burglars ripped open the machines and removed the money.

It is believed the incident occurred sometime between 6 p.m. Sunday and 7:00 a.m. Monday.

Opening lead — king of spades.

A bridge player, like a poker player, does not take kindly to the possibility that his opponent is bluffing him, and many players will go to great lengths to expose a psychic, even though only a suspicion of it exists. I am reminded of this by a hand I played many years ago in a world championship tournament against Sweden.

I opened the hand with a perfectly normal bid of a spade and the Swedish North over-called with one notrump. South jumped to three clubs with what appeared to be a game-going hand, and North responded three hearts. South was now stuck for a bid because he wasn't keen about notrump, and he was also reluctant to commit the hand to a minor suit game by bidding four clubs or diamonds.

So he temporized with three spades, leaving room for three notrump and at the same time allowing North to carry on in any other way he saw fit, including the possibility of bidding a game in spades.

Upon learning his partner had spades, North decided that even though I had bid spades I might not have them, and accordingly he raised South to four spades. After two passes — apparently my partner also suspected my spade bid — four spades came back to me.

I had no reason to question the honesty of my spade bid, so I doubled. This turned out very well and we defeated the contract two tricks — 500 points — after I had led the A-K and another spade. It was an especially good result for us, since three notrump could not have been defeated.

The moral of the tale, if there is one, is that while it is perfectly proper to suspect your opponent of attempted skulduggery, you should be doubly careful not to convict him on circumstantial evidence only.

Top businessmen brought into war on poverty

(Editor's note: This is the third of five parts dealing with the failure of the government's vaunted "war on poverty" and the approach to the problem President-elect Richard M. Nixon has promised to take.)

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
Ottawa News Service
Washington Bureau

On Jan. 23, 1968, President Johnson announced with familiar Texas-style fanfare still another new anti-poverty program.

"To press the attack on the problem of the jobless in our cities," the President said, "I propose that we launch the Jobs Opportunities in the Business Sector (JOBS) Program—a new partnership between government and private industry to train and hire the hard-core unemployed."

At the same time, the President revealed he had called upon a group of leading executives led by Henry Ford II to form a "National Alliance of Businessmen (NAB) to operate JOBS and find 500,000 jobs for the hard-core unemployed by June 1971.

The President called it a "tall order" for American business, and well he might.

At first, it was not clear whether the Alliance was just

'67 accident case brought into court

STROUDSBURG—James J. Vitez, 1322 Hottle Ave., Bethlehem, Tuesday filed suit in the Monroe County Court asking for damages in excess of $10,000 against Clinton F. Bruch, Kunkletown R.D. 1, and Edwin L. Strohl, also Kunkletown R.D. 1.

The suit arises from an accident which occurred Oct. 22, 1967, when Vitez was injured while riding his motorcycle and was struck by a truck driven by Strohl, owned by Bruch, Strohl's employer.

Vitez charges both defendants with negligence and carelessness. He further claims that he lost $1,623 which was the total wages he was unable to collect while recuperating.

He also claims that he lost $50 per week additional income as a guitar player because he has been unable to work in that capacity since the accident.

The damage to his motorcycle came to the amount of $312.

another "gimmick" marking the 480th federal domestic program or was a significant departure from old strategy in the war on poverty.

In retrospect, the latter appears to be true.

For one thing, the Alliance marks a sharp break from the "welfare state" approach. Poverty has never before been considered the concern of private industry; the "social conscience" of the American businessman has never before been pricked.

Real source by-passed
Yet, it was obvious the war on poverty was in deep trouble and that the kaleidoscope of federal programs was not focusing in on the real source of poverty—unemployment. Nor were the hard-core jobless of the city ghettos finding their way in the labyrinth of anti-poverty programs.

There were other forces at work pushing the government to shift the heaviest burden to the private sector. One was the Vietnam war and a fiscal squeeze that made it necessary to concentrate on a few select programs. Massive spending on housing, for instance, was out of the question.

Another was growing pressure from liberals agitating for the federal government to become the "employer of last resort" for millions of poor people. Yet, the question was still unanswered whether the American economy could provide jobs for every man willing and wanting to work.

The Alliance asks a good deal of the employer. In fact, it asks him to hire the person he normally rejects first.

NAB literature warns employers that the hard-core is a person with a multitude of problems, such as no money, no transportation, in trouble with the law, family in need of more food, shelter, and medical services, little self-respect, and no clear idea of what is expected of him.

To get economy-minded businessmen to take the risk, the government offers to pay the extra costs for transportation, education, training and health services.

Some of these services, however, are now being provided by the government-sponsored Concentrated Employment Program (CEP), which makes available to the poor everything from dental care to legal aid. The CEP exists in all cities where the Alliance operates and is supposed to find and funnel the hard-core poor into the JOBS program.

It is obvious from the budget of OEO that the government is now concentrating heavily on finding jobs for the poor and that it holds great expectations for the JOBS program.

Nearly half of the OEO 1969 budget of $1.95 billion is going to programs for the hard-core unemployed. The biggest increase is for JOBS, whose budget more than doubled, from $70 million to $162 million.

OEO funds are channeled to the Labor Department's Manpower Development and Training Administration (MTDA), which provides an additional $38 million, giving a total budget for the jobs program of $200 million. This is nearly half of the total 1969 MTDA budget ($455 million).

First results encouraging
The initial results of the Alliance-JOBS program have been on the whole encouraging, although one short-term goal has already been quietly buried.

The first goals and target dates for the Alliance, as announced by the President last January, were to hire 200,000 youths over the summer and 100,000 hard-core poor by June 1969. The summer goal, however, was subsequently lowered to 156,000, while the actual number of summer jobs made available was only 40 per cent of the revised figure.

But the Alliance is way ahead on its other, more important goal of 100,000 jobs by next June. As of late September, nearly 12,000 companies had taken total of 84,000 hard-core unemployed (78 per cent Negro), of which 61,000 had stayed on the job.

Leo C. Beebe, NAB executive vice chairman, reported in early November that the hiring of hard-core poor was progressing at the rate of 20,000 placements per month. He predicted the Alliance might hit its initial goal of 100,000 jobs by January instead of June 1969.

Another surprise development Beebe reported was that two-thirds of the hard-core poor were being trained by companies at their own expense. The other third was covered by 1,000 contracts negotiated between the Labor Department (MTDA) and individual companies at an average cost to the government of about $2,900 per worker.

The success of JOBS has been reflected in the latest government unemployment figures, which showed a drop of hard-core jobless to 350,000 in November, down more than 100,000 from a year ago and the lowest since 1953.

The Alliance is also having an impact on efforts to bring together the vast array of anti-poverty programs. It is experimenting with "one-stop" centers where the hard-core poor are registered, matched, and referred to jobs.

Beebe calls it the "United Fund method."

"We think the unified approach is as valid for hard-core employment as it is for fund drives, and it is our intention to encourage its further development."

Accomplishment in itself
If the Alliance and JOBS program bring about better coordination and administration, that alone would be a major contribution to the confused war on poverty.

There is much euphoria in Washington today over the initial success of the Alliance and JOBS program. OEO officials talk of it as a "model" approach in the war on poverty.

Yet, it is questionable that such euphoria is justified at this early date.

For one thing, a breakdown of NAB statistics shows that some regions of the country are far behind their assigned goals. Region II, for instance, which includes New York City, Newark, Jersey City, Buffalo, and Rochester, has met only 28 per cent of its commitment, or 5,923 out of 22,600.

Another cloud in the sky is that while private industry has long been in the business of training, it is new in the business of providing social services and counseling.

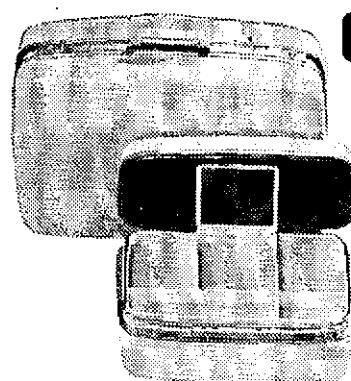

Beebe noted in November that one survey indicated the need for more intensive motivation training and guidance. Problems like legal aid, health care, and man-to-man counseling may have to be handled by government agencies.

The most crucial test of the Alliance is still to come: it has yet to be shown that the present rate of 20,000 placements a month can be sustained.

Much seems to depend on the general state of the economy. Beebe has warned Congress already that the program will work only if the economy remains healthy; companies are hiring the hard-core poor because business is booming and there are jobs to fill.

But the slightest downturn in the economy would probably put many hard-core back on the streets and halt the JOBS program in its tracks.

Just how much of the burden of poverty American business can shoulder remains to be seen.

Guest speakers Paul Janca, an associate with L.F. Rothchild, a financial institutional firm in New York City, and Clyde Messinger, Area Coordinator for Trade and Industrial Development, Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction, will give cost and building and other pertinent data on the Vo-Tech proposal to the four, nine-member school boards.

Sebring has requested the four boards to take a formal vote on whether to establish the school no later than at their February meeting.

According to Sebring, the cost of the proposed school is $1.51 million, compared to the $1,367 million, a 1966 figure. Earnings on investments and federal and state grants will reduce the cost to $1.13 million, compared to $906,000 in 1968.

Estimated cost includes a building to house 10 shops, site and site preparation, architects' fees, machinery, equipment, furniture and financing costs.

Federal grants will total $240,582, compared to $229,000 in 1966, plus $120,291 under the Appalachian Regional Development Act.

A 20-year bond issue would result in millage increases based on 1968 assessed valuations as follows: Stroudsburg, 0.56 mills; East Stroudsburg, 0.51 mills; Pleasant Valley, 0.50 mills and Pocono Mountain, 0.41 mills.

If the Delaware Valley District of Pike County became a part of the vo-tech school attendance area, the millage in each school district would increase a fraction of one-one-hundredths percent of a mill.

Sebring said two years of planning and building will be necessary before operation of the school begins, during which time a director and secretary will be employed at a total cost of $22,700 a year (the total cost would be $12,850 annually). The four or five participating school districts would share the costs proportionately.

State reimbursements per pupil over and above regular high school reimbursements are: trade and industry vocation, $35; agriculture, $35; home economics, $20; distributive education, $50.

Approved travel, 50 per cent; text and reference books, 10 per cent; teachers' salaries for new and expanded courses, 50 per cent the first year, 25 per cent the next year; additional equipment, about 50 per cent.

All reimbursements to local districts will continue even though those students will only be spending a half day in their local district schools. The rest of the day, will be spent at the Vo-Tech School.

Transportation to and from the Vo-Tech School is reimbursable the same as it is now to the district schools.

The cost for 300 pupils the first year is estimated to be $595; second year, 350 pupils, $516; third year, 400 pupils, $465.

Local cost per pupil range from $318 for first year to $319, third year.

The operational cost for the first two years of $22,700 per year would be shared by the districts on the following basis: Stroudsburg, $4,253; Pocono Mountain, $2,824; East Stroudsburg, $2,744; Delaware Valley Area, $1,721, and Pleasant Valley, $1,308. The remaining funds, state appropriations, would amount to $9,850.

Groner retires after 19 years as Stroudsburg school head

Retiree looks back on growth

By PETE GRADY
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Earl F. Groner looked back on 19 years (1950-1969) as superintendent of Stroudsburg Area School District and said that today's Stroudsburg graduate in advanced science is so far superior to my own education in that field that I would have to go back to school to catch up.

Groner who came to Stroudsburg High School as a history teacher in 1932 cited changes in the students and school during his near two-decade reign as superintendent. The most important change for the school was when Stroudsburg School District was reorganized into the Stroudsburg Union School District in 1955. Stroudsburg School District brought into its campus students from Delaware Water Gap and Stroud Township elementary schools.

Prior to its reorganization Stroudsburg took only tuition students from these two elementary schools.

Union enlargement
In 1957 Hamilton Township school joined Stroudsburg to complete the full union school district.

The Stroudsburg Union School District became the Stroudsburg Area School District and the seven-member school board was increased to nine members in 1966.

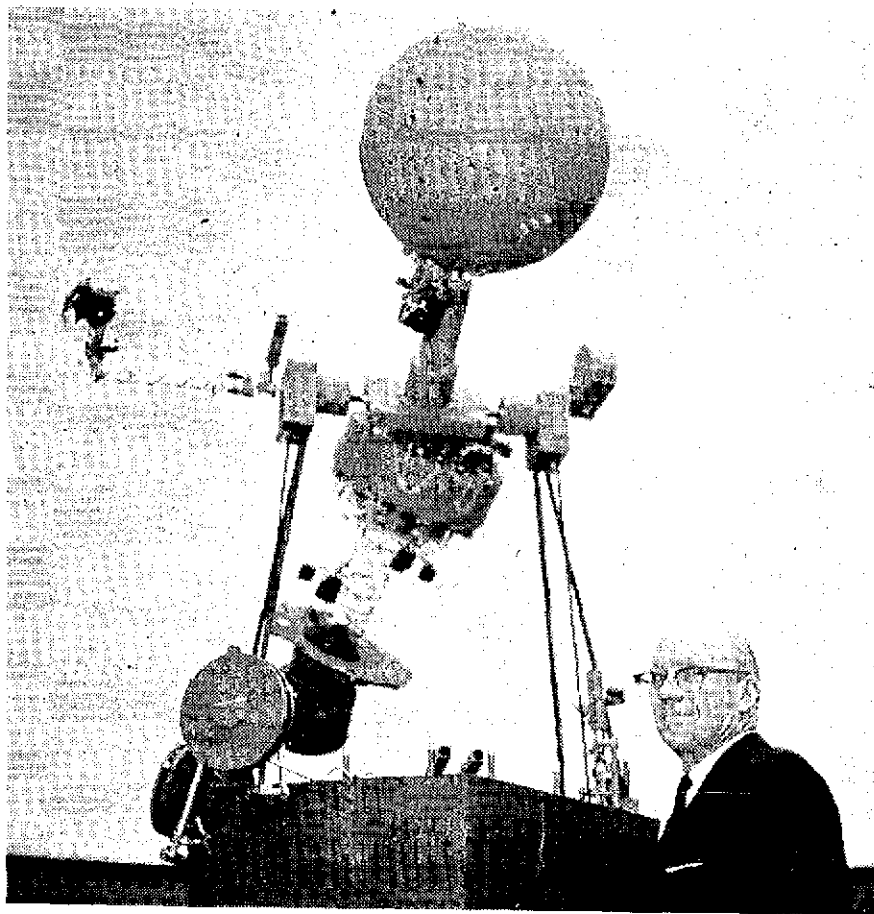

"The demands on education are greater in every respect today," Groner said, "from student, parents and community."

Groner faced today's paramount question of spending more and more money on education with down-to-earth realism.

"It's here, we have to face it," he said. "We simply have to spend more money on education because society demands it."

Peeking into the future of Stroudsburg Area School District Groner noted the two major fields in which the district will play leading roles: administration staff reorganization and construction of a Middle School.

In harking back to the past Groner recalled his first year in 1932 at Stroudsburg High when he received an annual salary of $1,200.

"In 1950 when I became superintendent a teacher's starting salary was lower than $2,400," Groner said.

Today's starting salary for a new teacher at Stroudsburg is $8,600.

Student growth
Citing Stroudsburg's student population growth Groner said that in 1950 there were 1,313 students as compared to today's population of 3,580 students.

"There was no hot lunch program for the students in 1955," Groner said. "Today we're feeding 1,600 students daily."

Groner remembered the days when a college student teacher program consisted of about two classes a semester. "Now it's a full half-year of instruction."

A teacher's daily classroom load in the forties and fifties could include six classes a day and a study period, Groner said. "I remember when I bought bats for the baseball team and there was no salary for a baseball coach back then."

Just before World War II all it took to get into a fairly respectable college was a high school diploma, Groner noted.

Now you need more than the diploma, he said, you also need good marks.

"I remember when we prided ourselves on sending 50 percent of our graduates on to higher learning institutions," Groner said. "Today we'd look down on that percentage."

Groner recognized that now was "an opportune time for change in superintendents," and added that the last year was the first year in which he had some sort of assistance in his long role of superintendent of Stroudsburg Area District Schools.

ESSC graduate
Groner graduated from East Stroudsburg State College in 1932. His tenure at Stroudsburg High included five years as a history teacher; assistant principal, Stroudsburg Junior-Senior High School, nine years; principal, four years and superintendent 19 years.

Groner received his master's degree in science degree in administration and supervision, New York University in 1941. Graduate work beyond a master's degree includes courses at the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia.

Professional affiliations include Pennsylvania Association of District Superintendents, Pennsylvania Association of Chief School Administrators, National Education Assn., Pennsylvania State Education Assn., American Public School Systems, Stroud Union Teachers' Assn.

Community affiliations include member and past president of Monroe County Historical Society; past district chairman, Monroe County Boy Scouts of America; past member of board of directors, Monroe County YMCA; member of the board of trustees, Monroe County YMCA; member and past president of Stroudsburg Rotary Club.

Also, teacher of the Men's Bible Class, membership 100. Stroudsburg Methodist Church; member of board of trustees and treasurer of Educators Investment and Discount Co.; member of the board of Pennsylvania Private Business Schools and Lehigh Valley Education TV Corp.; board member and secretary, Stroudsburg Engine Works.

Wells named successor

STROUDSBURG — Earl F. Groner was asked for the Superintendent's proposals and recommendations during a meeting of the Stroudsburg Area School Board Wednesday night.

He first asked the board to consider action on his resignation as superintendent.

The board accepted, "with regret," the resignation which is effective July 1.

Groner then addressed the board and said:

"It is unusual for a superintendent to recommend his successor, but knowing the circumstances, I personally recommend Samuel O. Wells III as superintendent for the period July 1, 1969, to July 1, 1970."

The board approved the appointment.

Groner had one more year to serve on his current four-year appointment.

The board also approved, upon a recommendation read by board secretary Dr. John P. Lim that the school's planetarium be named after Groner. "In recognition for service to the present Stroudsburg education facility which was due to his foresight and perseverance."

The school board tables discussion and action on a proposed centralized tax collection office for the four county school districts for the second time.

The proposal was introduced during the December meeting with agreement to study district tax collection methods.

Director Raymond A. Roberts presented the results of the study on tax collection in the district. Total cost of collection in Stroud Township, Stroudsburg Borough, Hamilton Township and Delaware Water Gap, plus cost of bonds for four tax collectors is $12,844.75 (including per capita, occupation and real estate taxes.)

Number of tax bills to be prepared for collection in the four municipalities totals 16,448 which includes 6,334 for real estate and 9,514 for per capita and occupation.

Collection cost as presented in the report would be 15 cents per bill plus a $25 flat rate from J. L. Cohen Co., Stroudsburg certified public accountant, as compared with 25 cents per bill an estimated bank collection cost.

Director Donald M. Stone recommended the board negotiate a proposal, "an experimental deal" which would compromise the need for computerizing bills.

Stone said the computerized billing should be given a chance and something should be worked out by Feb. 14 when final action must be taken.

SCS unit wins award from FFA

HARRISBURG — Arlington (Bud) Martin, Monroe County Commissioner, accepted on behalf of the Monroe County Soil and Water Conservation District, a special citation Wednesday from the Future Farmers of America for "decided contribution" to agricultural education in the area.

The presentation was made in Harrisburg by James Pink, state superintendent of agricultural education, during the 40th annual mid-winter FFA convention at the Forum in the Education Building.

Martin is also a director of the county conservation district and accepted the citation, the first to be received by the local district.

The district has sponsored FFA Speaking Contests and Soil and Water Conservation Awards program for FFA chapters in the county and encouraged FFA members in conservation exhibits, field trips, wildlife projects, conservation classes and to attend conservation meetings.

The Pennsylvania Association of the FFA honors certain firms, organizations and upon occasion, a few individuals who have made a decided contribution to agricultural education in the Commonwealth.

Scientist calls on graduates to examine basic knowledge

EAST STROUDSBURG — A Jefferson Medical College microbiologist urged a reexamination of basic knowledge in American education Wednesday during his commencement address to 93 mid-year East Stroudsburg State College graduates.

Dr. Russell W. Schaedler,

professor and head of the Department of Microbiology at Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, said students should examine the "pea in the pod" rather than just being content with the names of the parts such as "stamen and pistil."

Students know much detail of basic knowledge but are completely oblivious to the environmental and surrounding aspects of knowledge, he said.

This basic lack of knowledge of what surrounds things and people causes higher learning institutions "to pick up the pieces" when students go from high school to college, he noted.

In his topic "Revolve, Academe, Revolve," he said that change in the academic world is nothing new, that student criticism and revolt has been around a long time.

"What was new," he said, "was that the students have brought (revolt and criticism) out into the limelight."

Dr. Schaedler noted that this clearing of the academic world could be a "good thing," that it might cause the American public to dig down in their pocketbooks for an even better system of education.

"But this does not condone student rioting," he added.

Students want a greater role in the university life, he said, they want the university to become part of the community. He termed this view "not unrealistic."

"What is unrealistic is the hoopla made out of the revolt and rioting."

He noted that the student's extreme revolt against authority the college, the world, the police—has put the "heat on the academe."

He found no fault with students protesting against racism, war and the lack of free speech and in the campus world: large classes, regimentation, university withdrawal and aloofness from the community.

There is no time to get to know the professor in a class of 100, he said pointing out the unbalanced scales in an ever increasing student enrollment versus a staggering shortage of qualified faculty members.

In calling for a "paced education" in which student's needs and wants should be thoroughly examined he urged an overhauling of a "locked step curriculum" in which all first year students are required to take a certain number of prescribed courses.

He blamed Pennsylvania legislators for outdated educational laws and urged that there should be less mandatory teacher education courses and more accent on student teaching out in the field.

"For years there has been a stand-off between the academic world and the political arena," he said. "But in the last few years the academic world has been heard in the political arena."

Area police meet tonight

STROUDSBURG — The Fraternal Order of Police, Stroud Lodge 75, will meet tonight at 6:30 p.m. in Stroudsburg Municipal Building. The business meeting will follow a venison dinner. Movies will be shown after the meeting of an Elk hunting trip in the Pacific northwest.

New superintendent eyes new educational frontiers

STROUDSBURG — "Education in all Pennsylvania school districts has moved up from the corner grocery store to the era of the supermarket," newly elected Stroudsburg area school superintendent Samuel O. Wells said Wednesday night.

"The new frontiers in education are right on our doorstep and we must know when and how and where to bring them inside our house of education to make it glow with learning," he said.

Wells believes that school district communities are sympathetic to changes in the school system when the system advocates new instructional tools to handle the constant turnover in educational plans and planning.

"We can no longer run this school district with one supervisor," Wells said adding that there would soon be an announcement on the reorganization of Stroudsburg Area School District's administrative staff.

"The advent of television in the home was one of the giant steps in education in the last 20 years," Wells said. "With modern advertising of advanced education on television, more people are vitally concerned with education than ever before," he added.

Wells remembers when he started Stroudsburg's first guidance program in 1949 and how easy it was back then to talk to a college admission officer.

"It's a rare day in June to see one today," he said citing one of America's most pressing programs in the present educational world: a high school student entering the college of his choice.

Wells said he felt sorry for the "late bloomer" in high school who begins to show promise in his senior year and usually isn't able to get into a fairly good college because of his overall high school record.

"The community life revolved around the school when I first started teaching," Wells said. "But now with the refinement of quality television shows a family can see the best in the world right in their own home. And today there's more student involvement in educational circles than community involvement."

He received his master's degree summa cum laude from Lehigh University in 1949.

At Stroudsburg High Wells has served as math and science teacher, guidance counselor, assistant high school principal, high school principal, chief school administrator and assistant superintendent of schools.

Coaching experience
Also assistant football and basketball coach during the end of the 1942-43 season, and director of athletics.

He served three-and-one-half years with the United States Army as a personnel officer in the Photographic and Transportation Corps.

He is a member of the Christ Episcopal Church, Stroudsburg; Stroudsburg Kiwanis Club; Stroudsburg Playground Director for 15 years; a manager in the Monroe County Babe Ruth League; a member of the Stroudsburg Teachers' Assn., Pennsylvania State Education Assn., and National Education Assn.

Wells is married to the former Julia M. Downs who at present is Stroudsburg School District Business Office Manager.

The couple has two children, Kathy Lyn, a recruiting nurse for Reading Hospital, Reading, and Michael David, a sophomore at Stroudsburg High School.

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—Sophomore Steve Bilsky's jump shot with three seconds remaining gave underdog Pennsylvania a stunning 32-30 upset victory over 10th ranked Villanova Wednesday night.

All-Pro Gordy retires

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)—All-Pro guard John Gordy of the Detroit Lions announced his retirement Wednesday night to accept the job as executive director of the National Football League Players Association.

Gordy's announcement came as he stepped down from the post as president of the NFLPA at a banquet here winding up the players association annual meeting. This year's was the first joint convention between the National and American Leagues' players groups.

During his year as president of the NFLPA, Gordy was one of the main movers in the threatened players' strike last summer which resulted in improving players' benefits.

A spokesman for the group said the NFLPA wanted to retain Gordy's "outstanding talents and ability" and consequently, offered him the newly created executive director's post.

Gordy broke in with the Lions in 1957 and he played on their NFL championship team that same year.

They laughed too soon

Austria's Witrud Drexel, 18, jumps over a bump as she comes from behind Wednesday at Schruns-Tschagguns, Austria, to snatch the victory in the Downhill of the Montafon World Cup Ski Races from an already rejoicing French trio. Her second Downhill win within a week puts Miss Drexel into second place of the World Cup standings. Three French girls were hugging and kissing each other and posing for victory pictures, completely ignoring Miss Drexel. Starting in 25th position, she dashed down the 2,300-meter course in 2:16.76 minutes to out-class the French trio by more than a second.

Another bid to become first U.S. female jockey foiled as males balk

Barbara Rubin, who would have become the first woman jockey to compete in the U.S. if she rode "Stoneland" in the fourth race at Tropical Park, Miami, Fla., as scheduled, is shown outside a special dressing room trailer as she announced Wednesday that she would not be riding due to pressure from jockeys who refused to ride in the third race unless she was scrubbed from the fourth. Track officials were forced to abide.

MIAMI (UPI)—Pretty Barbara Jo Rubin, who split up with her boyfriend over her ambition to become horse racing's first female rider, was taken off her mount in Tropical Park's fourth race Wednesday "by mutual agreement" because male jockeys threatened a boycott.

Trainer Bryan Webb removed the 19-year-old daughter of a Miami Beach bar owner from the 12-to-1 longshot Stoneland barely an hour before post time and went looking for a male rider to replace her.

"We took her off by mutual agreement. They refused to ride," said Webb, referring to the other jockeys in the race.

Barbara Jo is Webb's exercise girl and earlier he had stood solidly behind her attempt to break the sex barrier of professional jockeys, saying if the other jockeys refused to ride, "Then I guess they'll have to cancel the race."

Miss Rubin's clipped comment to newsmen after the race when she had changed from racing silks into a checkered dress was, "I'm very disappointed."

The pigtailed jockette said she thought she could have ridden the horse, Stoneland, better than her substitute, Jorge Velasquez, one of the nation's leading male jockeys. The horse finished a badly beaten ninth.

While Barbara Jo was changing into riding silks before the race in a trailer drawn up behind the male jockey quarters, someone threw a rock which broke one of the trailer windows.

"I think it was very small of them," said Miss Rubin.

Webb explained that jockeys refused to come out for Tropical's third race Wednesday, the race preceding the one in which Barbara Jo was scheduled to ride Stoneland. He talked to the track stewards and decided to take her off the mount.

"This thing's going to keep on until those jocks give the girls a chance," said Miss Rubin.

The trainer said he had Barbara Jo listed to ride today but probably would take her off again. Miss Rubin said she didn't know what her next move would be.

When the horses came onto the track for the fourth race, the fans, from the far end of the grandstand to the far end of the clubhouse, hooped the jockeys en masse.

Webb said he thought "it was just a few riders—some of those jockeys that just ride two or three times a year—who stirred this up."

Miss Rubin's attorney, Robert H. Burn charged the threatened boycott was "definitely a conspiracy" and said he believes the Florida Racing Commission "will take action against the trouble makers."

New drag record set by Arfons

FORT STOCKTON, Tex. (UPI)—Art Arfons, former holder of the world land speed record, Wednesday cracked his own quarter mile drag record, speeding to 267.85 miles per hour in his new jet-powered Green Monster.

It was the first time Arfons had run his newest car, which bears the same name as his past cars.

He hit slightly more than 100 miles an hour in his shakedown run Wednesday at a tire test track, and upped the speed with each test until mid-afternoon when he broke his old record of 258.82 miles per hour set in 1965.

"She ran beautifully," said Arfons. "I had no trouble at all keeping her on the line and bringing her to a stop at the end of the course. The standing start with all that power gives you a sensation not easily forgotten. When you release the brakes you get a boost like you have never gotten before."

Arfons used up a mile of the 7.7-mile long test track to get his car stopped.

Higgins gets four years in jail

RUSTON, La. (UPI)—Former Boston Red Sox manager Michael "Pinky" Higgins was sentenced to four years hard labor Wednesday in connection with an auto accident last year which killed one person and injured several others.

Higgins received the sentence almost a year after he crashed into a Louisiana Department of Highways crew on Interstate 20 near here.

Fans cling to slim hopes for Russian hockey tour

MONTREAL (UPI)—Die-hard hockey fans Wednesday hung onto the slim hope that Russia's showpiece team would have a change of heart and go ahead with a scheduled eight-city Canadian tour despite its claim that the opposition isn't worth it.

But some of the fervor was missing, at least where the people who collected money at the ticket-windows were concerned. Afternoon newspapers in Montreal, where the Russians were supposed to launch their tour against Canada's Eastern "Nationals" Friday, failed to carry ads promoting ticket sales that their morning counterparts produced on their sports pages.

"The Russians' now-we're-not-getting-stretched-right-down-to-the-wire, late Wednesday in Moscow, the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation hinted the tour would not be cancelled if Canadian officials clear up financial arrangements and schedule their best amateurs to play the Russian team.

In Winnipeg, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said the financial arrangements long since were cleared up and agreed to by the Russians.

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association (CAHA) estimated it would lose more than $200,000 if the Russians reneged on their promise to play in Canada. They were due here Wednesday, but the Air Canada flight they were to have taken arrived from Moscow with only 10 passengers—some of them Canadian.

"It appears," one Canadian Embassy source in Moscow was quoted as saying, "that there have been some misunderstandings." This source, like the fans back home, remained optimistic that the Russians would have a change of heart.

So did several members of the Soviet Embassy staff in Ottawa. They said they had bought tickets for themselves and their families to Friday's opener and lacked word from Moscow on how they stood.

In Stockholm Rudolf Eklowe, vice president of the International Amateur Ice Hockey Federation, said that group could not go along with a Canadian demand that the Russians be immediately suspended for cancelling their tour at such short notice.

"We must give the Russians a chance to explain their move," Eklowe said. "You can't suspend a country just like that."

Eklowe said "Similar things have happened before" without an offending country being suspended. As an example, he cited the 1963 world tournament, when the Czech team went home midway through the competition because its president had died. The Swedish Association also cancelled a tour of Sweden by a Soviet Army team with only 24 hours notice in protest against the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia last August.

Soviets state reasons for tour cancellation

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Soviets said Wednesday night their National ice hockey team would not go to Canada to play "considerably inferior" opponents.

"The Russians, who have won six consecutive world titles, accused the Canadian Amateur Ice Hockey Association of keeping them in the dark about financial arrangements and game schedule during their scheduled tour.

At the same time, the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation hinted the tour would not be cancelled if Canadian officials clear up financial arrangements and schedule their best amateur teams to play the Russian team.

The Soviet Federation, the news agency TASS reported, sent telegrams to the Canadian Federation and the International Ice Hockey Amateur Federation saying the Canadians latest proposals "do not correspond to the verbal agreements reached in Moscow last December."

The telegram also described as "unfounded" the Canadian demand that the Russians be immediately suspended for cancelling their Canadian tour at short notice.

The Soviets said while two top Canadian amateur teams are touring Europe, the federation supposes "that the Soviet side will meet with teams of inferior level."

"In the opinion of the Soviet Ice Hockey Federation, negotiations of the financial side of the travel of Soviet teams to Canada are much too protracted."

"A decision of the departure of the Soviet team for Canada depends on the Canadian side."

"The Soviet Union considers unfounded the appeal of the Canadian Ice Hockey Federation to the International Ice Hockey Federation."

Pittsburgh escapes NHL cellar

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI)—Spirited Pittsburgh defeated sluggish Minnesota 3-1 Wednesday night and climbed into fifth place in the National Hockey League's West Division, leaving the North Stars all alone in the basement.

It was Minnesota's 12th straight game without a victory and marked Pittsburgh's second straight victory over Minnesota ice.

The North Stars also had their troubles off the ice. A freezing rain soaked in Twin Cities International Airport, forcing delay until this morning of their chartered flight to Boston where Minnesota plays the surging East Division leaders tonight.

Pittsburgh departed without high-scoring right winger Keith McCreary, who was confined to Minneapolis Northwestern Hospital with the flu and an ear infection. He will remain here five days and must take the train back to Pittsburgh; since doctors ruled out flying because of the ear ailment.

Colonels beat Nets

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI)—The Kentucky Colonels classy backcourt of Louie Dampier and Darel Carrier combined for 57 points Wednesday night in a 115-102 American Basketball Association victory over the New York Nets.

The victory evened the series between the two Eastern Division clubs at three wins apiece, and moved Kentucky to within 1-2 games of the idle Minnesota Pipers.

JIM MURRAY

His own man

Before Charlie Sifford, if a Negro walked on a golf green in this country, chances are he was carrying someone else's clubs and - or a wet towel to wipe somebody else's ball.

If he was in the grille room, he was carrying somebody else's coffee. He came to fix a shower, not take one. Golf was not a game for the ghetto. Neither did it leave any time for carrying picket signs, joining demonstrations, or running for office. Charlie birdied, not talked, his way through social prejudice. He broke barriers by breaking par. His weapon was a 9-iron, not a microphone. Charlie stands as a social pioneer not because he could play politics but because he could play golf.

Golfers, you have to know, have to be single-minded human beings. Ask one of them what he thinks of Richard Nixon and chances are he will frown and say "Too much right hand" or "He's bringing his right shoulder through too fast." The golfer doesn't know his politics, just his handicap.

Prior to Charlie, pro golfers had the effrontery to have a "Caucasian only" clause in their by-laws. It was the recreational arm of the Ku Klux Klan. Charlie came out of the darktown alleys of Carolina, packing for the rich folks, but practicing his own swing by moonlight. He "looped" for the hot-headed Clayton Heafner with whom he gyped through the tournaments. He hustled the hoods of Philadelphia. Charlie putted for his supper. He played muck-and-dime games with the same skill and enthusiasm as $10 Nassaus. Charlie learned how to save strokes around the green and around the first tee, too.

Shoots Down Barriers

The singer, Billy Eckstine, got him out of nickel cigars and nickel putting contests and together they began to apply the abolitionist movement of golf. The first break-throughs were—and I have to think, were intended to be—taken. When they were back to a wall, golf tournaments would let Negroes in—and then sit back and watch them shoot 89. "See? It's not their color, it's their score," they would contend.

Charlie doubled-crossed them. Charlie could play this damn game all right. Charlie was competition, buddy.

His swing was nothing to get drunk over. Off the tee, Charlie ends up with his hands crossed, his eyes. He looks like a guy who had just fouled off a low, outside 6-and-2 pitch. But when Charlie gets around the green and smells money, he's like a surgeon.

Charlie is the only Negro to have won a tour tournament. He made the field—and the cut—in five National Opens. He has been in the top 60 money winners every year since they let him in—1961.

They kicked his ball out of bounds on some Southern tourneys, but Charlie held his temper. No Uncle Tom, neither is Charlie a minstrel Negro. doesn't like his back slapped any better than his face. Charlie is his own man, the face around the cigar frequently is scowling. He doesn't like anybody standing in his line—on or off the course. Getting a weekly threatening letter from some mental case in Florida, as Charlie does, hardly promotes a sunny outlook on one's fellow man anyway.

One Left to Master

But Charlie, has now played in every tournament in America save one—the Masters. This August Augusta tournament has a complicated formula for selecting its field. If you come from Formosa, it's easy to get in. If you come from a cotton patch in Carolina, it's impossible.

The one avenue open to Charlie isn't really open at all. Past winners of this tournament can vote in a man who, either because he wasn't lucky enough to be born in Formosa or to have had one bad round in the Open, does not otherwise qualify.

In the past two years, Charlie has played this game about as well as anyone on the circuit, certainly as well as anyone in the Masters. The past Masters selected Mike Souchak and Tommy Jacobs.

Pretty soon, Charlie found people driving into him from the front tees. "Sure I was disappointed. Sure I know it's the only tournament Negroes have never played in. Sure I know that most of those Masters winners come from Texas or the Deep South. But I find letters putting words in my mouth to get at Jones (Bobby) and the Masters. So I get this letter from Bobby Jones telling me to stop threatening him. I don't threaten any man. I GET threatened. But I felt that, when I finished 25th in the money list, or won that tournament, or took third in the Canadian Open, I was entitled to some consideration. I have never disgraced anybody with a golf club or with a salad fork."

It is a feeling of this 22-handicapper that the Masters ought to send a car for Charlie and, considering he's the only guy in the field who couldn't get started on his golf career 'til he was 33 years old or his tournament career 'til he was almost 40 because it took democracy so long to catch on in this country, maybe they ought to give him two a side. If they do, I'll guarantee you Charlie will be voting on the invitee next year.

Coaching all-stars is a dream

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—George Allen, who leads his West charges against the East in the 19th annual National Football League Pro Bowl Sunday, has a problem. But it is one that most coaches would relish.

A crowd of 60,000 was predicted for the game at Memorial Coliseum.

"It's like a dream," says Allen, "to be able to choose between men like (Dick) Butkus and (Tommy) Nobis. That's like being able to choose between Carl Yastrzemski and Lou Brock to play left field."

Chicago's Butkus and Atlanta's Nobis join Mike Curtis of Baltimore and Maxie Baughan of Los Angeles as a formidable quartet of West linemen.

Allen, who was fired and rehired by the Rams during an 11-day span after Christmas, has nine of his Rams and seven Colts in the contest. Baltimore quarterback Earl Morrall, still smarting from last week's Super Bowl embarrassment, will be at the helm at kickoff, "because he's the league's player of the year and certainly deserves to start."

Morrall, a 34-year-old veteran, will be playing in his second Pro Bowl and his first after an 11-year layoff. Playing for the East in 1958, the former Michigan State star threw a 39-yard scoring pass to Ray Renfro for his team's sole tally in a 26-7 setback.

Sunday's classic is billed as a struggle between the West's defense and the East's potent offense.

Tom Landry's East squad boasts such notables as Cleveland's Leroy Kelly, the league's leading ground gainer, receivers Paul Warfield, Homer Jones and Roy Jefferson and quarterbacks Don Meredith and Fran Tarkenton.

Except for Baltimore's Super Bowl players, both teams arrived here Sunday. The West is training at UCLA while the East is drilling at cross-town University of Southern California.

The New York Jets' smashing 16-7 defeat of Baltimore last week has resulted in cautious optimism from the players rather than confident predictions. West quarterback Roman Gabriel of Los Angeles has a belated New Year's resolution:

"Last year I said we (the Rams) would be in the Super Bowl. Then I followed that up by saying the Colts would clobber the Jets. No more predictions. I don't want to start the New Year off wrong."

Grid rules basically unchanged

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI)—The Football Rules Committee Wednesday voiced full confidence in the present state of college football by making the fewest number of rule changes in recent history, all of which were considered minor.

"It was obvious from the outset that the individual members of the committee had no inclination to propose major changes in the rules," said new chairman John Waldorf, supervisor of officials of the Big Eight conference.

"Furthermore, the feeling now is to carefully study any proposed alteration for at least a year in advance," he added.

The 16-man group, however, wound up its three-day meeting by taking serious note of the rising cost of intercollegiate athletics. It established a fact-finding commission to survey cost factors in the schools' athletic programs.

The commission study will be conducted with the American Football Coaches Assn. and athletic director representation on the Rules Committee.

It was authorized in response to increasing opinion that the return to one platoon football might be an important answer to the inflationary problem.

Three of the nine minor rules changes were referred to subcommittees for study during 1969. They dealt with better definitions or clarification of clipping penalties, forward pass completions and pass interference and intentional grounding by the quarterback.

The other changes included alteration in field markings, limitation of the maximum length of cleats to 3-4 of an inch and clarification of the rules governing roughing the kicker penalties. Also selected were minor changes dealing with non-contact versus contact fouls, the batting forward of a lateral pass and the addition of an official's signal to indicate disqualification of a player.

Forzano named Navy grid coach; quits job with pros to take post

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI)—Rick Forzano, a man who never played college football but who is known as a skilled recruiter of college players, Wednesday was named new head football coach at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Forzano, 40, is the offensive backfield coach of the Cincinnati Bengals of the American Football League, and a former Navy assistant coach. He has also coached the St. Louis Cardinals offensive backfield and was the head coach of the University of Connecticut team.

He replaces Bill Elias, fired last month after a dismal 2-8 record. Elias had been coach for four years. His fate was sealed after Navy lost the second game of the season 49-15 to Boston College and angry calls poured into the Academy from all over the country. The 21-4 loss to Army drove the nail into his coffin.

Forzano said he "gave up a job with the best boss in the world to take the best college coaching position in the country." His reference was to Paul Brown, his former boss at Cincinnati in pro football.

"Once you've coached at the Naval Academy it's hard to beat. The young men you get here are the best," the new coach said.

The former Navy aide said "this was the only college coaching job I would ever consider." On the problem of recruiting, Forzano said "we'll just have to hit more areas and recruit more intensively."

Navy athletic director Capt. J. O. Coppedge hailed Forzano's "enthusiasm, dedication and knowledge of football," said he had "unassailable credentials and superb recommendations," and noted his experience covered high school, college and professional football and included five years at the Academy.

But a spokesman for the athletic department stressed the real reason why Forzano was chosen as the answer to Navy's failing football fortunes.

"His record shows he is one of the most effective athletic recruiters in the past 15 years," the spokesman said.

"While he was at the Academy, he played a prominent part in the recruiting of all-American quarterback and Heisman Trophy winner Roger Staubach."

Recruitment problems are the key to Navy's football woes. The service academies are having an increasingly difficult time persuading outstanding athletes to attend, because of the five-year military requirement, the Vietnam War, and the high salaries now being offered in pro football.

Forzano joined the Navy staff in 1959 replacing Wayne Hardin who was made head coach. During Forzano's five years at the academy, Navy never lost to Army.

As head coach at Connecticut, Forzano was named Yankee Conference coach of the year in 1964 and in 1965 he achieved UConn's first victory over Yale in their 90-year-old intra-state rivalry. His overall record at Connecticut was 17-10-1.

With the St. Louis Cardinals in 1966 and 1967, he coached such outstanding backs as Johnny Roland and Willis Crenshaw. At Cincinnati, under the famed Paul Brown, Forzano supervised the development of Paul Robinson into the AFL rookie of the year.

Sidelined by an injury in his freshman year at Penn State, the five-foot-eight, slightly built, crew cut coach began his football coaching career as an assistant at a high school in Akron, Ohio.

He was next appointed to the staff at Kent State, Ohio, and from there moved to Navy.

Forzano was given a three-year contract with unspecified terms. His salary is generally believed to be in the $22,000 range. He is married and has three children.

Stengel's condition serious

GLENDALE, Calif. (UPI)—Former New York Yankees skipper Casey Stengel Wednesday "took a few steps and briefly sat up in a chair" for the first time since he underwent surgery for a perforated ulcer last Friday.

The 78-year-old Stengel, who guided the Yankees to 10 American League pennants in 12 seasons, remained in serious condition at Glendale Hospital but a spokesman said he was "making real good progress."

The clowning Hall of Fame manager remained in the hospital's intensive care unit and wasn't allowed visitors except for his wife, Edna.

It was Stengel's second hospitalization in two months.

Musial appears to be a shoo-in

Campy may be lost again in Hall of Fame shuffle

NEW YORK (UPI)—When the Dodgers were the Beloved Bums of Brooklyn, the inevitable cry after every losing season was "wait'll next year."

Roy Campanella heard it often in his playing days so the phrase came naturally to his lips just a year ago when he missed election to baseball's Hall of Fame by eight palty votes.

"There's always next year," he added hopefully.

But this is "next year" and Campy's chances may be no better.

This is the year the name of Stan Musial is on the ballot for the first time and Campy could be lost in the shuffle again in the rush to guarantee a first ballot victory for the incomparable Musial.

No player in history—not Babe Ruth nor Ty Cobb nor Lou Gehrig—ever was elected unanimously but any baseball writer who doesn't vote for Musial simply hasn't been looking, listening or reading for the last 26 years.

The voting mechanics are simple. Any 10-year veteran of the writers association is eligible to vote for as many as 10 players active between 1949-1963. Any player whose name is on 75 per cent of the ballots is elected.

It's not as simple as it sounds. Even among 10-year men, there's a wide age differential in the electorate and often a wide difference of opinion. Furthermore, there's no law that says a voter must write in 10 names.

Our ballot is cast for Musial, Campanella and Johnny Vander Meer with seven spaces blank.

By RITA JAMES

Dear Rita: Will you please tell me what causes impaired hearing? MRS. M.E.

Dear Mrs. M.E.: There are so many causes of deafness and impaired hearing that space does not allow me to list them all, but here are a few — childhood illnesses such as scarlet fever, measles, mumps, etc.

Heredity, a blow on the ear which might create intense pressure rupturing the eardrum. Loud noises close to the ear, also certain medicines. I am sure your doctor will be glad to enlarge upon those mentioned.

Dear Rita: I am a handicapped person having a hearing loss. I am proof reader with a publishing house. My work keeps me busy concentrating so that I do not have to hear very much as to office talk or orders.

However, occasionally it is necessary for some of them to interrupt me — how do you think they do it? They just stand there and say whatever it is, and I am supposed to know what they are talking about. Why don't they know enough to touch me on the shoulder before starting to talk, then I could turn around and make an effort to understand them.

Won't you please say something in your column about such people and tell them how easy it would be to talk to those of us who are so handicapped? HELEN MCC.

Dear Helen: If you have not consulted an ear specialist to find out if something can be done for your hearing loss, I suggest you do so.

Don't expect your office associates to adjust to your impaired hearing. It is your problem to adjust to them.

Have your desk placed toward the back of the office facing everyone. You will then be able to see someone approaching and be on the alert.

Dear Rita: We had some friends visiting us last week, one of our guests had an operation on her ear, which she claims has restored the hearing in that ear, she is going to have an operation on the other ear in a few months. Do you think surgery will restore my hearing? MR. G. A.

Dear Mr. G. A.: It is encouraging to learn about restored hearing by surgery, but unfortunately, not every type of hearing loss lends itself to an operation. Only an ear specialist can tell if surgery will help you regain your hearing.

The swallows of Capistrano do not really return every year on exact schedules.

We care It isn't easy to buy bean coffee!

Nowadays, very few stores offer you bean coffee.

Why does A&P still offer coffees in the bean?

Basically, because "We Care."

Specifically, because we know these facts:

The coffee bean is nature's seal that holds the flavor.

Once that seal is broken by grinding, flavor fades...

NO MATTER HOW IT'S PACKAGED.

The shorter the time between grinding the beans and brewing your coffee, the greater the flavor.

So if you want the finest cup of "The Think Drink" you've ever tasted, buy and brew one of A&P's three Bean Coffee blends... Eight O'Clock, Red Circle or Bokar.

Not every store can offer you custom-ground bean coffee.

A&P can and does.

Shouldn't A&P be your store?

Area resident master of woodcarving art

By FRED WALTER
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — The art and craft of woodcarving and engraving remains a rare talent on the contemporary market of mass produced art pieces. It seems to have become lost or misplaced as an expression in creative art forms.

Limited to the use of natural media of nature, the continued appreciation of this art form can be credited to such thoroughly gifted men as George N. Decker, a lifetime resident of the Stroudsburgs who has captured a myriad of nature's forms and transformed them permanently into graceful, intricate hand-carved or engraved replica lifeforms.

Decker can always remember when he liked to make sketches of beautiful things in life, especially animals, even back to grade school when he used to draw giant chalkmurals on classroom blackboards or when he illustrated his letters home in the "V-Mail" during World War II.

But the introduction to the art of preserving natural beauty in wood came during his early twenties and developed gradually, maturing to mastery as can be seen in some of his meticulous creations.

What started out as a detached activity, became a challenging and demanding form of personal expression.

Decker is the kind of quiet, next-door, working man who would hardly make known to neighbors the potential he possesses.

It all started when one of his children accidentally upset a glass bowl containing his prized tropical fish, a hobby to which Decker had been dedicated previously.

"Well, I decided to look for a hobby involving less animate things. I decided right then that I couldn't take chances where the life of any creature was involved and where any damage that occurred could be replaced," Decker related.

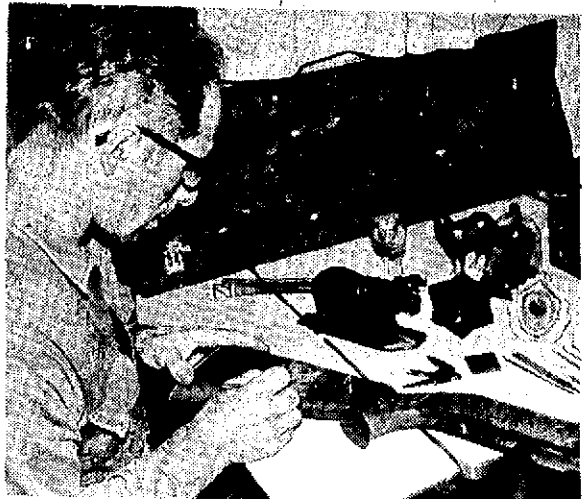

Already talented at sketching and painting, the curious Decker discovered a feeling for carving living subjects, especially birds, fish and animals.

A small, balsa-wood guppy was the first attempt. "I began carving fish," Decker explained, "because this seemed easier for a beginner. But after a time I made up my mind that if I could do that, I could also do more difficult subjects."

From there he went on to a bass, a trout and other fish; then to birds, animals, to more intricate work on gun stocks, portraits and novelty creations in wood-jewelry.

"Now I would take on anything, any subject with any wood material," Decker said, after becoming acquainted through many years of working with different media in woods, tools and techniques.

Decker credits many admirers and friends for introducing him to new ideas and methods, which he has absorbed, to produce imaginative and handsomely decorative artwork.

George Decker displays a few of his handcrafted pieces of wood while he engraves a gunstock. In background is a board of Burma teak wood, showing a World War II underwater demolition destroyer of which Decker was a member when it entered Tokyo Bay in 1944.

Decker agrees that such a demanding art form is fading out, "but all a person needs to do is to try. I never tired and always kept trying to take on something new."

Decker has taken a variety of raw pieces of wood from the basics such as bass, poplar or white pine, to more refined work with butternut or walnut gunstocks, and mahogany, to the rare colors and grain of Burma Teak wood, zebra wood and ebony from Africa, rosewood from Africa and Brazil. He has taken in hand many crude cuts and transformed them, to be admired a lifetime.

"Most of my work has been given away here and there, to friends and relatives," Decker said. Occasionally his woodcarved-world has been exhibited.

Decker has not limited himself to using one type of wood for a single finished product, but has combined the colors and grains of several woods into one single creation, such as a swallow in flight, composed of layers of rosewood and ebony.

Decker's hands and imagination can transform a moment of one's memory into a permanently engraved scene in wood.

One of his personally prized possessions, carved into Burma Teak, about a 10" x 20" board, is a replica of an amphibious personnel destroyer (APD-39), the first underwater demolition team to enter Tokyo Bay in World War II of which Decker was a member. The APD is pictured in movement on the high seas.

Decker, at 43, still works as an overhead crane operator at Patterson-Kelly Co. Inc., perhaps somewhat in contradiction to his accepted hobby in the fine arts. He lives in a modest, mobile home on 934 Clay Ave., with his wife and sons, Larry, 20, a sophomore at East Stroudsburg

State College and Alan, 17, recognized the simple forms and activities of nature and the master's touch, Decker has importance of preserving them.

Records can help shave income tax

PHILADELPHIA — The choice between itemizing deductions and taking the standard deduction of Federal income tax return sometimes depends on how good a taxpayer's records are, Seymour I. Friedman, District Director of Internal Revenue, declared.

Unless deductions can be backed up by supporting documents and records, a taxpayer may want to take one of the standard deductions. In that case, no records of contributions, taxes and interest paid or medical expenses need be kept, Friedman said.

Itemizing deductions will usually result in lower taxes for those who own a home and have property taxes and interest on a mortgage to pay. Friedman said it might also pay to itemize deductions for those who made large charitable contributions, experienced heavy medical expenses or who suffered losses from storms, fire or theft.

Where married persons file separate returns, both husband and wife must either itemize deductions or claim the same type standard deduction. One spouse can't itemize while the other takes the standard deduction.

The appropriate Tax Table, shown in the instructions, is used to determine the tax on incomes under $5000 when either the 10 per cent or minimum standard deduction is claimed.

Help for poor reader

Dear Ann Landers: Our middle son, age 10, is an unhappy child. This boy has always done poorly in school and we were at a loss to understand why. The teachers complain that he daydreams in class, doesn't pay attention, and misses at least half of what is going on. His grades show it.

Last week it came to my attention that the boy cannot read. I was shocked. How he managed to fool everyone is beyond me. His English teacher suggested that he might have dyslexia, which she described as a disorder of the brain that can be corrected. Do you know anything about this? Does this mean my child is retarded? Can you help me?

READER

Dear Reader: Children who have dyslexia are not retarded. In fact, they have normal or above average intelligence. No one is certain what causes this lag in visual and auditory development, but the problem is often discovered because the child has trouble reading. The experts agree dyslexia tends to run in families and could be triggered by a difficult birth or a psychological problem early in life.

I suggest you write to the Executive Director, The Secretary's (D.E.W.) National Advisory Committee on Dyslexia & Related Reading Disorders, Room 8A34C, N.I.H. Building 31, Bethesda, Md. 20014. I recommend this organization with complete confidence because I know something about it.

Dear Ann Landers: I've been dating this fellow for almost a year. He is really groovy and I dig him the most, so please don't tell me to cut the connection. I couldn't do it.

The only thing wrong with Jake is he's a little bit cheap. Whenever we go with another couple, he manages to be away from the table when the check comes, or he is so slow to find his pocket that the other guy gets it.

Lately we've been doubling with my best friend a lot. She told me her steady refuses to double with us any more because Jake is such a sponge. I am so embarrassed I could take the gas pipe. How do I

Youth arrested on auto charge

STROUDSBURG — Richard Pyatt, 18, of 19 Sterling Rd., Mount Pocono, is in Monroe County Jail in default of $500 bail after he was arrested by Stroudsburg Borough Police and charged with operating a motor vehicle during a time his license was under suspension.

Pyatt was committed to jail last November on a charge of larceny. The charge stemmed from the theft of $58 from a cigarette vending machine at Katz's Service Station, Stroudsburg.

tell him?

BOISE BLUES

Dear Boise: In plain English, and at once, unless he understands another language better.

Dear Ann Landers: We are up to our necks in debt. Bruce is a good person but he loves to gamble and he lies to me constantly. He'll bet on whether or not Thanksgiving falls on a Thursday. Bruce swears he paid the rent and the utility bills and then I got a three dunning letters and somebody shows up in person. Last month the power company turned off the gas and electricity.

Twice last year Bruce went to a loan company to keep from getting his wages garnished. My father finally lent us $800 because we were about to lose our car and furniture.

Gambling is as bad a sickness as alcoholism. Please, Ann, tell me what to do. I'm ready to pack and clear out

Dear No: Have you ever heard of Gamblers Anonymous? This organization is patterned after A.A. and has helped a great many people. The National Headquarters address is: P.O. ## Area jobs reach high at 26,500

STROUDSBURG — Employment in the Stroudsburg area reached an all-time high in 1968 when 26,500 persons were employed. The peak was reached in August and represented a gain of 100, over the previous peak, reached in August 1967. The 100 gain was registered in manufacturing industries, principally in primary metals and metal products according to the year-end report of the Stroudsburg Office of the Bureau of Employment Security.

Unemployment equaled last year's low when 1.1 per cent of the total civilian labor force was unemployed. This represents approximately 300 persons unemployed. Of the unemployed, 83 were filing for Unemployment Insurance Benefits, but many of the unemployment beneficiaries were in-between jobs, such as workers in the apparel and construction industries, and several were involuntary retirees, who had reached the compulsory retirement age of their employer's employment policies.

Total benefits paid during 1968 amounted to $445,000, an increase of $73,000 over 1967. The increase was caused principally by an increase in total maximum benefits paid per week from $45 in 1967 to $60 in 1968. The peak unemployment benefits paid in the Stroudsburg Labor Market Area were made during 1958 when $1,173,000 was disbursed.

Employment in the Stroudsburg Labor Market Area has witnessed a steady growth with a minor setback in 1960, when the county was in a mild recession. During calendar year 1968, the local office of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service placed, in nonagricultural employment, 2,604 persons; 2,043 were local residents. The remaining placements, for the most part, were from contiguous counties.

The local office participated in the President's Summer Youth Campaign a program designed to secure work for youths between 16 and 22 years of age. Cooperating fully with the local office was the Tobyhanna Army Depot.

A total of 132 area young people were hired. This was the largest number of youths employed, for summer work, at the depot, in the four-year-history of the program. Those employed were hired in jobs ranging from clerical duties to technical work in electronics and mechanics. Most of the youths employed, received the national minimum rate of pay, $1.60 per hour.

The local office also participated in four Manpower Development Training programs; two at the General Hospital. Third one is in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State Council, International Union of Operating Engineers, who are conducting a 26-week program, at the Boy Scout Resaca Falls Reservation in Heavy Equipment Operation.

Currently there are 105 trainees in this program. Another training program underway, is to train 50 persons in the Culinary Arts Field. Each trainee will receive approximately 13 weeks of training in such occupations as waitress, hostess-cashier, and cook helper.

The continued growths of local industries has created shortages of practically all types of skilled and semi-skilled help, and shortages of suitable factory trainees, are creating staffing problems in local manufacturing plants.

Resorts shortage Staffing of resorts is somewhat easier, although shortages of available help exist in this industry. The fact that room and board is provided, helps to import labor from other communities—meanwhile, rapidly developing shortages in lower cost housing, is creating a problem in importing labor for area manufacturing plants.

Although excellent highways should help to increase the commuting pattern of workers to this area, this has also acted in the reverse, since many area residents are employed in the Bethlehem-Easton-Allentown area, where basic steel wages dominate that region's wage pattern.

All indications, at this time, point to even greater expansion of local industry throughout the coming year, with many local plants increasing operations to meet heavy demands for finished goods. In order to fully utilize the scant labor supply this community needs training classes in basic reading, writing and simple arithmetical computations, the Bureau said.
